LORD GREY IS HOOVER BOOMER

British Hand Seen in Presence of Viscount at Col. House Luncheon

New York, Jan. 24.—Herbert C. Hoover, whose candidacy for the Presidency was publicly launched recently, has reached this city with his New York backers.

Prominent among these are Cleveland H. Dodge, the Morgans, and certain representatives of the railroads, notably the New York Central.

The Philadelphia North American, Wanamaker's newspaper, gives a highly interesting account of the launching of the Hoover boom, which took place at a luncheon given by Colonel Edward M. House, at which were representatives of the various interests supporting Hoover and anxious to secure his election as President.

At this luncheon were:

Ralph Pulitzer and Frank I. Cobb, respectively, owner and editor of the New York World.

Cleveland H. Dodge, Wall Street financier.

Cyrus H. K. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher.

Viscount Edward Grey, British ambassador to the United States.

It is rather unusual to have a British ambassador present at an occasion at which the boom for an American President is launched. But Forecaster Smith's dictum has gone forth, and we're in for another shivery Sunday. Snow tonight and tomorrow, and the mercury falling shamelessly, as it were, are included in Mr. Smith's prediction.

By tomorrow night, says Mr. Smith, the best to be hoped for is ten degrees above zero.

U. S. CAUTIOUS ON TRADE WITH RUSSIA

Washington, Jan. 24.—There will be no trade between the United States and Russia until England and France have laid down a trade program by which it can be assured that goods sent to Russia will not fall into the hands of the Bolsheviki for military and political purposes.

This was the answer that the State Department gave today to the representatives of a large number of American corporations who are here to discuss the question of Russian trade.

The conference of manufacturers, which was held here today, was presided over by E. P. Jennings of Lehighton, Pa., a manufacturer of printing machinery, who has large orders for Soviet Russia which he has been unable to fill.

Officials of the State Department stated that the United States has never had a blockade against Russia, but has merely had an embargo, and that this government is willing to permit trade with Russia at any time that there is assurance that such trade will not be used for military or political purposes.

England and France must establish trade with Russia because they are in dire need of raw materials which Russia has, according to information reaching the State Department.

For this reason it is believed here that England and France will establish a method of barter with Russia which will be so guarded that it will not furnish aid for the Bolshevik military campaigns.

KNOCKED DOWN BY ROBBERS

Victim Hangs Onto Payroll and Daring Crooks Flee in an Automobile

Attacked by two men today, one of whom pointed a revolver at him, Paymaster George Newsome of the Grueby-Faince Company, No. 566 East First street, South Boston, clung to the leather bag containing a $1,500 payroll, whiel a special officer chased the robbers away.

The robbers jumped into an automobile and disappeared. The attempted holdup took place in the doorway of the building, No. 566 East First street, South Boston.

Newsome was returning from the bank, where he had drawn $1,500. As he entered the building the two men sprang upon him. One of them knocked him down and kicked him. As he struggled to his feet, the second man pointed a revolver at his stomach.

Special Officer Harry Cheever, on duty in the building, saw the fracas and hurried to the aid of Newsome. As he approached, the robbers ran out of the building. Across the street an automobile was waiting. They sprang into it and drew the curtains, hiding themselves from view, as the chauffeur put on all possible speed. The car was headed towards the city proper. Its license numbers were hidden by blankets.

Newsome had maintained a firm hold on the bag containing the money, and the robbers got nothing. He was unable to give any description of the two men.

Special Officer Cheever, however, was able to give meagre descriptions, which were sent at once to every station in the city. He described the robbers as both about twenty-five years old. One was five feet six inches tall, and weighed about 140 pounds. He wore dark clothing, and a three-quarter length overcoat. The other man was five feet nine inches tall, and weighed about 160 pounds. He wore dark clothing and a black derby hat.

CHICAGO INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC INCREASES

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Chicago's epidemic of combined influenza and pneumonia continues to increase. Figures from the health department show 2,193 new cases of influenza and pneumonia for the preceding twenty-four hours, with deaths totalling 145.

Complaints made in some quarters that the rapid spread of the epidemic was partly due to lack of activity as a preventive and curative were denied by Health Commissioner Robertson.

"Whiskey will neither cure the disease nor prevent it," he said.

ARREST IN CLANCEY CASE NEAR

Police Hot on Trail of Man Who Left Murder Gun in Dance Hall

The hunt for the murderer of Patrolman William G. Clancey, shot to death in Roughan Hall, Charlestown, Thursday morning, today centred on the arrest of the man who placed the murder-gun under the radiator where it was found by the police.

As a result of information secured from a young Italian held at the East Boston police station, Sergeant James E. Lewis and Patrolman Bartholomew D. Winn were sent out to find the man wanted.

At the same time Adelina E. H. Grace of the West End, arrested in connection with the investigation of the shooting, was held in $500 bail by Chief Justice Bolster, after pleading guilty to a statutory offence.

DENIES SEEING MURDER.

The young Italian from whom the police secured information regarding the murderer's weapon, admitted under a grilling that he knew the man who placed it under the radiator in Roughan Hall. The youth, whose name is being withheld, admitted attending the dance until 11:30, Wednesday night, and told of a quarrel regarding a policeman's badge. He denied witnessing the murder.

As a result of what we advulged, Captain James E. Hickey immediately assigned Sergeant Lewis and Patrolman Winn to apprehend the wanted Italian. Sergeant Lewis, who was formerly attached to the Hanover street station, is familiar with Italian-speaking members of the underworld.

When the Grace girl was arraigned before Chief Justice Bolster, Sergeant Fitzpatrick said that she had been arrested as a result of the police investigation. The police believe that the girl is withholding informa-

2 POLICEMEN AT LEAST FOR DANCES IN FUTURE

An aftermath of the murder of Patrolman Clancey was seen at Roughan's Hall, Charlestown, where the war hero was shot, when two police officers appeared on duty at a dance. It was announced that hereafter two officers at least will be on duty at dances. Never again will a police officer be alone on duty at affairs of that character in Boston.

Hamby, Bank Robber, Ready to Die, Says "Quit Fussing"

By International News Service.

Ossining, N. Y., Jan. 24—"I am ready to go and I wish they would quit fussing," declared Gordon Fawcett Hamby, the bank robber "with the cold steel nerves," as he paced his cell in the death house at Sing Sing today.

Hamby is under death sentence for the murder of two clerks in the East Brooklyn Savings Bank on December 13, 1918, when the institution was held up.

The date of electrocution is set for next Thursday, and Hamby said he would not allow his counsel to ask Governor Smith for a reprieve.

WORCESTER'S MAYOR AIDS CLANCEY FUND

Mayor Peter F. Sullivan of Worcester has contributed $25 to the fund started by the Boston American for the destitute widow and three-year-old son of Patrolman William G. Clancey, the war hero, who was murdered by a gunman in a Charlestown dance hall.

Clancey's widow and little child are en route to Boston from England, ignorant of the tragic death of the husband and father.

The Worcester Mayor is a war veteran, having done his "bit" in the Spanish-American war, and he sympathizes strongly with Mrs. Clancey in her great loss.

"It will be pretty tough for her when she steps ashore in Boston and is told that the husband she came to greet is cold in death," said Mayor Sullivan. "What a hard ordeal she faces—to come to a country strange to her, with no friends or relatives to help her. I deeply sympathize with Mrs. Clancey, and I trust that the good people of Boston and vicinity will do their utmost to help her. It is a great pleasure for me to give

POWHATAN SURVIVORS IN PORT

Northern Pacific Disembarks 271 Passengers From Transport at New York

By International News Service.

New York, Jan. 24.—The 271 passengers of the waterlogged transport Powhatan, including a number of women and children, who were rescued from the ship in a storm at night, after facing the perils of the sea for five days and five nights, arrived here today on the steamship Northern Pacific.

The Northern Pacific also brought one of the last contingents of the A. E. F. from France. Representatives of the Rocky Mountain Club went down the bay to greet the soldiers and to give all hands, sea fugitives and troops alike, a rousing welcome.

Among those in the delegation were Governor Thomas E. Campbell of Arizona, United States Senator John B. Kendrick of Wyoming and John Hays Hammond.

TRANSFERRED AT SEA.

The transfer of the Powhatan's passengers was made in a heavy sea, 240 miles southeast of Halifax. The work began at 6 o'clock Thursday night under the glare of searchlights and was continued until 10 o'clock, when all of the passengers were safely on board the Northern Pacific. It was a hazardous undertaking and two of the Northern Pacific's boats

AMERICAN PICTURE FINDS 'LOST' BOY

Reorganized by his picture published in the Boston American, Alfred Curtis, the sixteen-year-old East Boston boy, who had been missing from his home for the past week, was discovered in a Lynn candy store. The boy was recognized by Patrolman Jack Kane and taken to headquarters to await the arrival of his father. He told the police he had spent his time in Revere and Lynn, obtaining employment in Connolly's candy store last Wednesday. He was willing to go home.

GIRL SEEKS SLAYER OF PATROLMAN CLANCEY IN WEST END

SHE FAILS TO POINT OUT MAN

Another Woman Is Held on Suspicion of Keeping Back Information

tion as a result of statements she is said to have made in a Scollay square store, where the young woman was employed.

At the request of Sergeant Fitzpatrick the case was continued until Wednesday and the girl held in $500 bail, in order that the police might continue their investigations.

The court was informed that the prisoner had been arrested before and that the Parole Board, in whose custody she had been, refused to have anything to do with her.

Girls continue to figure largely in the case, and it is as a result of the persistent questioning of girls that the police have come near success. Last night several of them were questioned at a dance in Charlestown.

Following this inquisition there was considerable activity on the part of the officers in the case. Special Officer Joseph Ferrari, attached to the Hanover street station, is one who knows the wanted man personally and who is seeking him.

Captain Ainsley C. Armstrong, assistant chief of detectives, is exercising general supervision over the investigating officers. He has questioned all the persons thus far brought into the case.

SCOUR THE WEST END.

One girl was picked up in the North End by a special officer from Station 1, and escorted through the West End, where several youths, well-known to the police through long criminal records, were pointed out to her.

She was obviously frightened and could identify no one as having any connection with the crime. The police hope to learn the identity of the patrolman's slayer through some woman who saw the murder.

MAY OFFER $500 REWARD.

One suspect, whose description has already been given wide publicity, still eludes the police although they believe he is still in the city. Any attempt by him, however, to escape from any of the city terminals will be frustrated as plain clothes men are keeping a close watch at these points.

It is believed that Mayor Peters will offer a reward of $500 for information which will lead to the arrest of Clancey's murderer, and that Police Commissioner Curtis is cooperating with him to this end.

At a meeting of Bunker Hill Post 26, American Legion, held in the Charlestown High School, resolutions were adopted resenting any imputation that the population of Charlestown is composed of thugs, gunmen and people of the underworld, and expressing sympathy for the widow and relatives of the slain policeman. Arrangements were made for a detail to attend the funeral of Patrolman Clancey.

CURTIS LAUDS SLAIN PATROLMAN CLANCEY

Police Commissioner Edwin U. Curtis has issued a general order on the death of Patrolman William G. Clancey of police division 15, who was shot to death in a Charlestown dance hall. The commissioner's order reads:

"It is with deep regret that I announce to the department the death of Patrolman William G. Clancey. He was appointed to the force on December 8, 1919, and assigned to division 15, Charlestown, and was killed on the morning of January 22, 1920, while in the performance of his duty.

"Although a native of this country and an American citizen, he was impelled to enter the war before the United States made its declaration, and enlisted in the Royal Field Artillery of the British army, serving with it from September 24, 1915, to May 26, 1919, taking part in the battles of the Somme, Devil Wood, Beaumont, Hemmil Ridge, Gonnerault, Vering and Arras.

"He came into the police department at the time when it was in need of loyal men, and during his short service gave good indications of his fitness for the position. One who is killed in the performance of his civil duty is not less entitled to honor than he who dies on the battlefield. Patrolman Clancey leaves a widow and one child, who are now in England. His long service in the army had precluded his laying up sufficient money to care for his family, but there is no doubt that the good citizens of Boston will see that his wife and child are cared for when they reach these shores."

Lawrence Police for 100 Hours Fail to Record an Arrest

Lawrence, Jan. 24.—For more than 100 hours the tranquil of the police station was not disturbed by a single arrest until Elbridge A. Dodge of No. 8 Green street, Haverhill, was taken into custody charged with the theft of 600 pounds of lead and fifty pounds of paint from a house on Alten street.

Dodge was seen by a police inspector on Lawrence street, near the police station, and somewhat conscious of the fact that he was being watched, Dodge is said to have retreated. He is well known in police circles. A three-months' sentence was handed down by the court in his case.

Clancey Hero Fund Contributions Are Acknowledged

The following contributions to the Clancey Hero Fund are acknowledged by the Boston American:

Edward E. Keevin, Boston	$2
Moses Rubinovitz	$1
George Hornstein	$1

toward the fund the American has started."

Another gift to the fund was made by Louis K. Liggett, head of the United Drug Company. Mr. Liggett gave $25, and says he hopes several thousands of dollars will be raised to help Mrs. Clancey and her baby.

Edward Keevin of No. 309 Washington street, Boston, contributed $2, and $1 each was given by Moses Rubinovitz and George Hornstein.

The Boston American wishes to impress upon its readers that no sum is too small to give. Every cent that is received by this newspaper will be recorded in its columns.

What a hard lot poor Mrs. Clancey and her baby face upon their arrival in this country. They have no relatives here. The only person to greet her will be her father-in-law, and he is not in a position to materially assist her. Practically alone in a strange country, her husband murdered, she faces a heart-rending ordeal.

The murder of Policeman Clancey, who was the first man on the newly recruited force to be killed, was one of the most dastardly and cowardly crimes that have occurred in this city in many years.

DIED PERFORMING DUTY.

He was shot in the back in Roughan hall, Charlestown, while he was about to place a young man under arrest for dancing improperly. The shot was possibly fired from a coat pocket as the sound was muffled. Several gangsters who had been warned to dance properly by the hero-policeman had threatened prior to the shooting to "get" him. Despite the threats he remained in the place of danger and did not flinch. He continued to do his duty up to the moment he was struck down.

For the benefit of those readers who have wondered whether Mrs. Clancey and her child will be permitted to enter this country on account of the possibility of becoming public charges the American can state authoritatively that they can enter. As Clancey was a United States citizen, having been born in Boston, his wife takes his citizenship and although the child was born in another country, he, also is a citizen of the United States, his father having been a citizen of this country before the child's birth.

Policeman Clancey, who was twenty-four years of age, was a hero in the best sense of the word. He entered the world war long before the United States.

DECORATED FOR BRAVERY.

While fighting with the famous Canadian regiment—Princess Pat's—Clancey learned that the United States had declared war against Germany.

Thereupon he took "Old Glory" from his kit and went over the top with it tied to his bayonet. He was the first American to carry the United States flag over in a charge against the Germans after we declared war. For this act he was permitted to wear "Old Glory" on one of the sleeves of his uniform. He received several decorations for bravery during the war. It was while on leave that he married the woman who comes to greet him here—only to find him dead.

The American believes in helping this poor widow and her child. Take the sting from that sad landing by letting this lonely war-bride know that there is REAL hospitality in America, that the hearts of the people here are big. The American has given $100 toward this worthy cause and hopes hundreds of its readers will contribute. Send donations to Clancey Fund Editor, Boston American, Boston 2, Mass.

REPORT SOON ON REMOVAL OF DEAD

Washington, Jan. 24.—Ambassador Hugh Wallace, at Paris, is expecting to report by cable within a few days to the State Department what action the French authorities have taken with respect to granting permission to the United States for the removal of the bodies of American soldiers. Chairman Porter of the Foreign Affairs Committee will grant another hearing to the representatives of the various organizations and to interested individuals. They will be informed then just how speedily the government will be able to move in the matter of returning the dead.

LORD GREY AT LAUNCHING OF HOOVER BOOM

Notable Group of Backers Start Campaign at Colonel House Luncheon

Hoover is understood to be the candidate of the Democratic administration, pledged to perpetuate Wilson's policies, and naturally the British ambassador is anxious to see policies continued which have been so advantageous to England.

Pulitzer and Cobb represent the New York World, which has been an unswerving supporter of the Administration and is generally recognized as the official organ of the Administration.

Curtis is publisher of the Saturday Evening Post, the Philadelphia Public Ledger and other publications.

Dodge is a leading Wall Street financier connected with the big interests. He is known to the public mainly as a heavy contributor to Mayor Mitchel's $2,000,000 election fund. He was also known as a large contributor to the Wilson campaign fund.

DODGE DEPORTED WORKERS.

Dodge also came before the public notice by reason of his association with the Phelps-Dodge Mining Company, which in 1917 deported 1,200 workmen from their Bisbee, Arizona, mining properties which caused great public furore at the time.

Colonel House is well known. He has been the right hand of the Wilson administration and probably is still, although a statement was given out for political purposes that he had had a difference with Wilson.

At the time the North America's article was printed, the presence of Viscount Grey at Colonel House's luncheon had not been made public, but since then the fact of his presence there has been fully verified, and the list now stands as above detailed, including the British ambassador.

NEW OFFER FOR BROCKTON WORKERS

Brockton, Jan. 24.—The Brockton Shoe Manufacturers' Association announced today that it would submit on Monday a new wage proposition to the Goodyear stitchers, welters and rough rounders. The offer, which was not made public, will be submitted at a conference in the afternoon at the rooms of the association, with a committee of ten from the Shoe Workers' Union. An earlier offer of 1 cent increase on a 24-pair case of shoes was rejected as being not worth noticing. The workers of the three types mentioned maintain that while they are more skilled than any other shoemakers, they now receive the lowest pay, averaging $38 a week. Cutters have a flat day scale of $43.20 for a 48-hour week, and piece workers receive $60, 70 and $80.

PRIEST AND LAWYERS TO ADDRESS IRISH FRIENDS

The Rev. Timothy O'connor of St. Peter's and St. Paul's Church, South Boston, will address the nurses of St. Brigid's Branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, at Catholic Union Hall, No. 1682 Washington street, Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Other speakers will be Thomas H. Mahoney and Miss Monica Foley, Boston lawyers. There will be music. Miss Lydia J. Springer, of Belmont, will preside. The meeting will be open to the public. Among the officers of the association are the Misses Annie Devaney, Abbie Leahy and Mary Church.

SUFFRAGISTS PLAN LAST CONVENTION

Suffragists from all over the United States will assemble in Chicago the week of February 12-18 for what is expected to be the greatest suffrage convention ever held, and probably the last in this country. It is planned, following this, the fifty-first annual convention of the National Woman Suffrage Association, to hand on the work of that body to the League of Women Voters. Headquarters will be in the Congress Hotel and the convention will open formally on Friday, February 13.

HAVERHILL BOYS START WORLD TOUR ON 15 CENTS

Worcester, Jan. 24.—Duane Hamel, aged sixteen and Joseph Lefevre, aged twelve, both of Haverhill, started out from their homes in that city "to see the world," but were picked up in the Union Railroad station here, as alleged runaways. The boys told Sergeants James F. Swan and John A. Sharry of the detective bureau that they were headed for the West. Fifteen cents was the joint finances of the two would-be world tourists. The police returned the boys to their home city.

LAWRENCE TEMPORARILY AVERTS WATER FAMINE

Lawrence, Jan. 24.—A temporary supply of water was arranged for as a means of saving Lawrence from a serious water famine. But one day's supply of water is in the reservoir this morning. The shortage is due to the fact that the normal consumption of water has been suddenly increased about 20 per cent, necessitating the use of much of the reserve supply in the reservoir. Superintendent M. F. Collins, of the water department warned the city government that Lawrence faces a serious danger.

CONTEST WILL OF MILFORD WOMAN

Milford, Jan. 24.—The will of Miss Mary Coan, who resided alone in Milford for many years, and owned Ideal block, is being contested at Worcester by her heirs. Among the bequests was one for $1,000 to Marcus Moran, Milford janitor and police officer.

MRS. GEORGE H. SYMES of St. Johnsbury, Vt., killed by her husband, who also took his own life to escape arrest.

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Jan. 24.—The State of Vermont was saved the expense of a trial and electrocution when George H. Symes, fifty-five years old, died at Bright Look Hospital from a self-inflicted bullet wound following the murder of his wife a few hours before.

Symes shot himself when he learned that the police were on his trail. He had quarreled with his wife and she had left him. Later he went to her home at No. 92 Main street and shot her, killing her instantly. He escaped before the police arrived and before neighbors knew of the tragedy.

He was seeking his sister at the home of Mrs. Cora Brigham on Bagley street when he overheard a telephone conversation that the police were looking for him. He stepped into the hallway and shot himself. He died four hours later at the hospital without regaining consciousness.

U. S. MAY KEEP ROADS TWO TO FIVE YEARS

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 24.—The railroads may not be returned to their owners March 1. Instead there are indications which encourage the growing belief that they will continue under the control of the United States government from two to five years longer.

Deadlocked apparently beyond hope of a compromise in time to enable Congress to pass the final legislation necessary to turning the roads back to their owners, Senate and House conferees on the railroad bill admit the outlook is far from bright. Section six of the Cummins bill, providing for a six per cent. guaranteed earning on the physical value of the roads and the labor clause which makes it a crime for two or more persons to agree to strike, are the main points of dispute.

Both Senator Cummins, Republican, of Iowa, and Representative Esch, Republican, of Wisconsin, after whom the two railway bills were named—and chairman of their respective committees—admit the measures have slipped into an impasse. It is understood that the Senate Commerce Committee is willing to give ground on the anti-strike provision in the Cummins bill, providing the House committee will support the clause guaranteeing fixed earnings to the railroads. But the House committee has refused to accept this compromise.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear on Congress to get it to amend the federal control act, making it possible to retain the roads for at least two years more and possibly longer. Five years has been suggested as a maximum.

This pressure is said to come from committees and organizations in all parts of the country, the chief argument used being that the return of the roads at this time would add to the already high cost of living.

Some of the members of the Interstate Commerce Commission express the same opinion, and President Wilson himself is said to be not entirely averse to the government retaining control of the roads, at least until the present unrest is over, conditions are more settled and a better solution to the whole railroad problem found.

The Powhatan still is in distress. At last reports she was being towed steadily toward Halifax, but radio calls were being sent out for further assistance. It was feared that the cable would break and Captain Randall wirelessed for heavier towing gear. The Powhatan is in tow of the Canadian government steamship Lady Laurier.

BAY STATERS SAVED.

Among the passengers transferred from the Powhatan to the Northern Pacific and brought to port were:

Lieutenant-Colonel John M. Dunn and Mrs. Dunn, Washington, D. C.; Jane A. Warden and three children, John, Henry and Nancy of McKinney, Texas; Lieutenant-Commander Howard H. Crosby, Somerville, Mass.; Maud I. Feamster and children, Felix and Robert, San Antonio, Tex.; Margaret B. Shipp, Raleigh, N. C.; Ada B. Rodier and two children, Gilbert and William, Washington, D. C.; Gladys M. Smoke, Ashland, Ill.; Paul A. Flanders, Chicago; Fayette W. Allport and wife, Mildred, Cleveland, O.; Captain Oscar B. Ralls, Gadsden, Ala.; Charles McKinley, Cambridge, Mass.; Ella A. Austin and daughter Margaret, Coblenz, Germany; Corporal James E. Thompson, Paynes Depot, Ky.

Also on board were 178 enlisted men taken from the Powhatan. They are attached to Camp Meade Replacement Unit No. 28, under command of Captain William E. Shipp. There are also sixty-seven members of the Graves Registration Unit.

On account of fog and rain the Northern Pacific was slow in getting to her dock. She was given a noisy greeting by harbor craft as she steamed up the bay past the Statue of Liberty.

Two Greater Boston Men Among Survivors of Transport Powhatan

A Cambridge and a Somerville man were among the passengers from the Powhatan landed by the Northern Pacific at New York.

One of these was Charles McKinley, thirty, son of Mrs. Isaac McKinley, No. 18 Vernon street, Cambridge. He enlisted in the Quartermaster Corps of the army when the war broke out. After the signing of the armistice, he was with the American Army of Occupation in Germany. His brother, William J. McKinley, twenty-two, also served from the beginning of the war in the infantry.

Lieutenant Howard H. Crosby, U. S. N., son of Mrs. Clara H. Crosby of No. 17 Madison street, Somerville, was another of the survivors of the Powhatan. Born in Somerville, he was graduated from Somerville High School in 1904. He was graduated from Annapolis in the class of 1908.

He served during the war on the U. S. S. Chester, and later at American naval headquarters in London. He was returning to England, after leave of absence, aboard the Powhatan. He is married, his wife residing with his mother at No. 17 Madison street. He has two sisters, Mrs. Marion Alger of Melrose and Dr. Georgiana Crosby of Brookline.

GENERAL ELECTRIC SHORT OF COAL

Unless a large supply of coal is obtained within two weeks, many departments of the General Electric Company of Lynn will be closed indefinitely and thousands thrown out of work. This was the announcement of General Manager Richard H. Rice, in circular letters posted in all departments of the plant.

The notice followed the appointment of fuel conservation committees in all branches, whose duty is to go about turning of unnecessary lights and shutting down power of machines not actually in use. According to the letter, the shutdown will affect at least 25 per cent. of the departments, and in order to continue operations at all the co-operation of the entire force of 15,000 will be imperative. The company is scouring the coal fields for fuel.

THREE IN RACE FOR SOMERVILLE SENATOR

Somerville politicians are getting an early start, for although the primaries are eight months away, three men have announced themselves as candidates for the Republican senatorial nomination to succeed Senator Joseph O. Knox, who expects to be a candidate for the Republican nomination to the Governor's Council next Fall.

Representative William Fleming of Ward 1, Charles M. Austin of Ward 3, and Former Representative William P. French of Ward 7 are the men who have already entered the field.

statement that there was nothing to be made public.

Later it was learned that only a few relatives attended the wedding. These included Mr. and Mrs. Edward Leach, parents of the bride, Walter Fleischmann, brother of the bridegroom, Lewis Marshall Heminway, eight years old and John Hylan Heminway, five years old, sons of the bride.

Mrs. Heminway, who gave her age as twenty-six, is twenty-two years younger than the bridegroom. She obtained a divorce from Lewis Heminway, a broker of Philadelphia, a year ago.

Mr. Fleischmann has three children by his former marriage. Under the terms of the divorce obtained by his first wife in Cincinnati last Wednesday she receives a settlement of $2,000,000, a Summer home in New London, Ct., and a yearly alimony of $25,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleischmann will remain in New York until the end of January, when they will go to Miami, Fla.

FREEMAN MADE HIS WIFE LEAD A DOG'S LIFE, HER SISTER CHARGES

AFRAID TO TAKE MEN BY HAND

Heiress Always Modest in Presence of Males, Testifies Mrs. Morton

Mrs. Margaret Reed Freeman, Hyde Park heiress, who is suing Ernest B. Freeman, treasurer and general manager of the Stirtevant Blower Works at Readville, for divorce, led a "dog's life" because of the restraint placed upon her by her husband when she met other men.

Mrs. Florence Reed Morton, Mrs. Freeman's sister, and wife of Frederick S. Morton, Worcester steel manufactured to this effect in the sensational divorce trial before Judge Braley in the Suffolk Superior Court. Mrs. Morton's testimony revived interest in the expectant spectators, who sat gloomily in the courtroom most of the day while Mrs. Freeman's sixteen-year-old daughter, Sally, was being examined privately.

"MRS. FREEMAN MODEST."

"What was the conduct of your sister in the company of men?" Mrs. Morton was asked by Damon Hall, attorney for Mrs. Freeman.

"She was always modest, extremely so," replied Mrs. Morton, who was allowed to answer after an objection to the question had been overruled.

"If we went to a theatre and a man appeared on the stage, my sister would immediately cast her eyes down; if we were walking on the sidewalk and came face to face with a man she would turn her gaze to the ground immediately in front of her; she never shook hands with a man; if a man's hand were offered to save her life she would not take it; when men came to the house she would say good-night with her eyes down."

Mrs. Morton went on with her indictment of the husband, telling of instances when she alleged, he offended her, his wife and others. She told in great detail of events that occurred in the North Country Golf Club, near Worcester, as early as 1907. The couple were married in Worcester in 1905.

DENOUNCED WIFE AT GOLF CLUB.

"I was not playing," she testified, "but my sister and Mr. Freeman had gone around a few holes when we noticed four men driving a high stepping team. I said, 'let's watch the way they drive,' and was doing so when Mr. Freeman cried out at my sister and me:

"'You're a pair of ——— pests.' He flew into a rage. Then he said: 'Come over here and I'll tell you what I mean,' and we sat down on a bench. Then for nearly an hour he slandered ——."

Mrs. Morton was stopped here and instructed to relate what the husband said. She said that at that time Freeman said:

"Ever since I have been married to Florence, no matter where I go, she always has her eyes on every man she meets. When I married her she had no reputation and the family was as low as anyone, and brought up in such scum." I might as well start divorce proceedings right away."

SISTER BROKEN IN HEALTH.

As a result of similar treatment, Mrs. Morton said, her sister became broken in health. She testified that Freeman once, in her presence, slandered his wife for the death of their son, Bigelow, who died when six months old. Another time, she said, Freeman referred to her father as a "low-lived man." She said Freeman was bitter in his references to the late Dr. Herbert O. Renner of Park Square and Framingham, once saying:

"She has been with this man night and day—with him at all hours. But I have packs of detectives who have got me in evidence if I needed."

Mrs. Morton said she invited her brother-in-law to produce proofs of his wife's infidelity, but that he said he was not going to give his case away to his wife's family.

PRESIDENT MAY GO SOUTH IN SPRING

Washington, Jan. 24.—No plans have been made for President Wilson to leave Washington in the near future, it was said at the White House today. The President has received many invitations to be the guest of southern resorts during his convalescence, but thus far none of the invitations has been accepted. It was stated that, while the present plans of the President call for his remaining in Washington, it is possible that with the approach of early Spring he may make a trip to some Southern resort which will not entail too great travel.

"ALDERMAN TOM" FOR DUBLIN'S LORD MAYOR

London, Jan. 24.—Thomas Kelly, M. P., known in Ireland as "Alderman Tom," was chosen to-day to be Lord Mayor of Dublin at a caucus of the Sinn Fein members of the Dublin Corporation.

Kelly is at present held in Wormwood Scrubbs Prison, London. As the Sinn Fein have a majority of two in the Corporation his election is assured.

AN ARTIST'S IMPRESSIONS AT FREEMAN DIVORCE TRIAL

CONGRESS WILL PUT PALMER ON GRILL

Change of Front on Sedition and "Red" Campaign to Be Investigated

By International News Service.

Washington, Jan. 24.—A farreaching congressional investigation of Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer's attitude toward proposed "anti-sedition" legislation and of the methods employed by the attorney-general's office and the Department of Justice in dealing with "Reds" was promised today by leaders of Congress.

They said the inquiry might be expected to include the circumstances surrounding the resignation of Francis Eamer Kane, as United States district attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, who wrote to President Wilson: "I am obliged to take this step because I feel out of sympathy with the anti-radical policies of Mr. Palmer and his methods of carrying them out."

ROSE PASTOR STOKES INDICTED AS "RED"

Chicago, Jan. 24.—The Cook County grand jury has returned indictments against eighty-five alleged members of the National Communist party, which was organized in Chicago some months ago. All of those indicted are said to have been active in the formation of the party. Of the total indicted three were women.

Among those indicted were: Rose Pastor Stokes, New York; Mrs. M. E. Was, Chicago; Katherine Lane, Chicago; Isaac Ferguson, New York; Louis Fraina, New York; Charles E. Rutherford, Cleveland; Alex Stoklitsky, Mexico City; John M. Ballam, Chicago; A. Bittlerman, New York; Max Cohen, New York; Charles Berba, Minneapolis; Paul Ellsbed, Detroit; Nickolas Hourwich, New York; J. Lovestone, New York; Paul Petrarch, New York; John Schwartz, Boston; Arthur Tykaska, New York.

CAUGHT IN TRAP, NEARLY LOSES LIFE

Groton, Ct., Jan. 24.—The howl that has been going up all over Connecticut about trapping and snaring foxes has become a roar here, since Ralph Arnold came near losing his life, and, in fact, is still in danger of permanent injury. He was out hunting bet on the trail of a fox when suddenly he stepped into a neatly-concealed long-tooth fox trap, shattering the bone of his leg. He had to hobble and crawl nearly two miles for help, reaching the nearest house nearly frozen.

POMEROY WILL STAR IN PRISON MINSTREL SHOW

Jesse Pomeroy, the noted life prisoner, will make his first public appearance as an entertainer since he was confined at Charlestown State Prison at the annual minstrel show of the inmates, February 2 and 3. Pomeroy will be the headliner of the show and will recite an original poem. The warden has been swamped with ticket applications for the show, which will be staged in the prison chapel. State officials and prisoners will attend the first performance, the public the second.

ASKS DIVORCE FROM MOHAMMEDAN HUSBAND

North Adams, Jan. 24.—Alleging that religious differences with her Mohammedan husband led to incompatibility, Mrs. Esther Farrar of this city has entered suit in Superior Court for a divorce from Jiemel Farrar on the grounds of cruel and abusive treatment. They were married in June, 1916, and have one child, of which Mrs. Farrar seeks the custody.

BETRAYED GIRL IS MOTHER OF QUADRUPLETS

Will Refuse to Marry California Naval Employe Who Deserted Her

Oakland, Cal., Jan. 24.—Deserted by the father of her four little quadruplet daughters, born at the Beulah Rest Home of the Salvation Army in East Oakland, was the plight of a twenty-year-old girl-mother today. Police throughout the State are making every effort to locate the father of the babes, who is said to have formerly been a civilian employe of the Mare Island Navy Yard and twenty-two years old. He disappeared from the navy yard two months ago.

TRUSTED HER FRIEND.

The names of the father and mother are known only to the police and the officials in charge of the home. The young mother's first name is Anna and she declared today she will not marry her betrayer, if he is found, to seek to make amends at this late date.

"The babes are mine alone," she declared. "I don't want any man for a husband who will desert his unborn babes."

Anna was twenty, one month ago. She says she met the father of her babies through a friend, who was keeping company with his brother. She trusted the friend, she said, and thought the new acquaintance was "a nice young man."

THREE BABES SURVIVE.

The three surviving quadruplets—the fourth is dead—were flourishing, apparently, today. They are tiny girls, and they have been named Dorothy, Doris and Dora. Dorothy was born first, weighs four and a half pounds and is marked with a pink ribbon; Doris wears a blue ribbon and Dora a white ribbon.

The girl-mother is the eldest of nine children. She is of Spanish extraction and very dark. Several months ago she came to the Beulah Rest Home and told of her plight. She said she had been deserted by the man who promised to marry her. The matron at the home took her in. She was made comfortable, kept in good spirits and she toiled daily with needle and silks and embroideries. She hoped for a daughter, and selected the name of Dorothy for the first girl. The next five days the Salvation lassies' home and quadruplets were born.

STOLEN HARVARD BOOTY RECOVERED

Petty thefts from students at a university like Harvard are always common, but the action of Police Captain Hurley and the advice issued from the Harvard College office will reduce thieving around the Cambridge dormitories to a minimum.

The detection of one thief and the recovering of some of the stolen property is made public by the announcement in the college daily that students may call at the Central Square Police and identify their stolen clothing.

Alice Brady Tells How a Girl Can Dress on $5 a Week

New York, Jan. 24.—Can a girl dress on $5 a week? Alice Brady, one of the best dressed women in the theatrical profession, says she thinks it can be done and here she tells how.

"If I were a business girl with a salary of $20 a week," she said, "I shouldn't try to dress like the daughter of a millionaire. I wouldn't cheat my stomach and in the end sell my soul in the mad effort to get silk stockings, expensive shoes, dresses and novelties."

"But if you had to spend $15 a week for living expenses and had only $5 left for clothes, how would you get along on that?"

"I'd save until I had enough for a good suit, costing, say, $50. I would get one suit a year. For instance, a heavy one this year and a light one next year, and I would have them of dark, serviceable colors and conservative cut, so that they would not be passe the second season. I would buy lawn waists. They are cheap and give ten times the wear of the crepes or the chiffons favored by so many working girls. For five lawn waists at about $2 each should enable a girl to look always fresh and dainty.

"I should want one smart hat, practically for all kinds of weather each season, and I should try to get these for $10 or less by waiting until the first buying rush of the season was over.

"As for stockings, I might have one silk pair for state occasions, but I would have lisle for every-day wear. The same applies to underwear; no silk, but fine and mercerized cotton.

"Of course, one could not afford furs on such an allowance, except the cheaper kinds. Instead, I would have a good heavy storm coat with pockets. And I would try to make my own chemises, nightdresses, handkerchiefs, summer dresses and blouses."

Here is the dress budget made up by Miss Brady on the basis of a $5 a week allowance for clothing:

1 Suit	$50
2 Hats	20
Storm coat	50
Gloves	10
Shoes	30
Stockings	6
2 Corsets	10
Lawn blouses	12
Total	$200

"This," she said, "would leave $50 for extras, such as hairpins, rubbers, umbrellas, or parasol. I should say a girl could keep herself very well dressed on $250 a year if she avoids fripperies and takes good care of her clothes."

BRAINARD IS CONVICTED IN N.Y. COURT

New York, Jan. 24.—Clinton Tyler Brainard, president of the Harper & Bro. publishing firm, was convicted on the charge of publishing an obscene book entitled "Madeleine, an Autobiography." The firm itself also was convicted in General Sessions by Justices McInerney, Voorhis and Hermans.

Imprisonment as well as a fine may be meted out in punishment.

Sentence was deferred, pending further investigation, and Brainard's $500 bail was continued. Brainard's lawyer asked for dismissal of the case on the ground that books published by Harper & Brother are selected by a "literary conference" with which the president has no direct connection, and that he personally knew nothing of the book in question prior to the preferment of the charge.

REVERE MAN IS OVERCOME BY GAS

James J. O'Brien, twenty-one, single, of No. 5 Beach street, Revere, was taken to the Frost Hospital, Chelsea, suffering from gas poisoning. While taking a bath gas escaped from a tube connected with a heater in the room.

ELEVATED 'GETS A HORSE' TO END TIE-UP

Huntington avenue car riders experienced their usual tie-up today when for more than twenty minutes service was paralyzed back of Ruggles street in the direction of Brookline.

On this occasion it was not a disabled car that caused the delay; it was an auto truck that suddenly became powerless shortly after seven o'clock on the grade going down from the Boston Lying-in Hospital in the direction of the Museum of Fine Arts. A trolley managed to shove it along for a distance, but at Ruggles street it stalled definitely.

A pair of horses attached to a contractor's dump cart finally got in front of the machine. A rope was hitched to the fender, and the horses pulled. A car aided with a slight bump or two.

Thus the good steeds rendered Huntington avenue safe for the workers once more.

MAY KILL COWS FOR LACK OF GRAIN

Only Two Weeks' Supply on Hand; Shipments Held Up by Car Shortage and Embargo

The New England grain shortage is rapidly approaching the point where it may be necessary for dairymen to kill their stock because of lack of feed, according to Boston grain dealers.

With only two weeks' supply of coarse grains on hand, and with further shipments held up by a car shortage and an embargo, the situation is the most serious in many years.

Chamber of Commerce heads are dissatisfied with the action of the Railroad Administration in regard to the New England grain crisis. Telegrams sent to department heads have been "referred." It is learned, and no definite promise of relief has been made.

The shortage of grain became acute several weeks ago. At that time 75 per cent of the grain cars were diverted to wheat transportation by the Food Administration.

The car shortage thus brought about had a quick reaction here, which was made worse when an embargo was announced by the Railroad Administration on coarse grains and stock foodstuffs destined for this section.

SEEKING MAN LAST HEARD OF 17 YEARS AGO

Relatives of Justin McCarthy, aged 45, a native of County Kerry, Ireland, last heard of in New York seventeen years ago, seek trace of him. His mother, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Culenah, residing in Ireland, is very anxious to sell her estate there and come to America. Owing to a peculiarity in the deed, however, she cannot sell the property until she has either word that her son is dead, or authority from him to sell the place.

When last heard of McCarthy was working for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company in New York. He had previously worked on drydocks for the government. Anyone having any information concerning the missing man should send it to J. J. Coleman No. 73 Church street, Hingham, his half brother.

FORMER DUCHESS WEDS BRITISH FLIER

London, Jan. 24.—Another world war romance was revealed in the wedding of the Duchess of Westminster, daughter of Colonel William Corawallis-West, and Captain James Fitzpatrick Lewis, who she nursed back to health after he had been wounded in an air duel.

The ceremony was very simple, and was performed at the office of the registrar at Lyndhurst, states the London Daily Mail. The couple became acquainted early in the war and for a time after his convalescence Captain Lewis acted as the duchess' secretary. He is prominent as an amateur actor and sportsman.

MILLIONS GONE, CHARGES WIFE RUINED HIM

Moffitt Calls Family 'Social Climbers'; Eloped with Newsgirl; Held as Thief

San Jose, Calif., Jan. 23.—William H. Moffitt, arrested here for alleged grand larceny in New York declares that his wife's social ambitions had ruined him, and that Miss Pearl Carpen, who posed as his wife here, had been "the valiant little soldier in life's battle," and that she "supplanted the wife who deserted me in adversity after I had given her riches."

"My millions are gone and I am in jail here, mostly as the result of social ambitions of my family and their refusal to come to my assistance in need."

WAS WORTH $6,000,000.

"I am sorry principally for the little woman who has stood by me and was more than a wife to me when the crash came. My daughter, Mrs. Frank Craemer, wife of a wealthy Brooklyn man, and my wife, Mrs. Ella Moffitt, were social climbers.

"Six years ago I was worth $6,000,000. My fortune was squandered by the women of my family in their attempts to gain social recognition. They are living now in a mansion on Long Island which I built for them. When panic in realty values came during the war times I was caught like many others with heavy obligations. It is the refusal of my family to help in adjusting these which has brought me to jail."

GIRL WEEPS OVER ARREST.

Since his arrival here, ten days ago, Moffitt has been promoting an extensive sale of town lots in the southwestern part of the city. Miss Carpen, 20 years his junior, and a handsome brunette, has been attending the sale office in South Market street.

They have lived at the Montgomery Hotel here as Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Marvin. No charge was placed against Miss Carpen until told of Moffit's arrest tears sprang to her eyes and she clutched a desk for support. From the little real estate office she hurried to the prison a block away.

Former "Realty King's" Wife Still Loves Him: "Was a Wonderful Man"

New York, Jan. 24.—Mrs. William H. Moffitt, estranged wife of the former "Realty King" who was arrested in San Jose, Cal., on the charge of having swindled small investors out of nearly $4,000,000 in fake real estate deals, received news of his capture with signs of real sorrow and sympathy.

"Although he has wrecked my life," she said, "I am sorry he has been arrested. He is a most wonderful man. Though he deserted me for another woman, I still love him. He made a terrible mistake, but it was because of the other woman.

WILL NOT PROSECUTE.

"Many a poor boy he sent through college and helped in other ways. I shall not prosecute him for desertion. Although he is said to have attributed his downfall to the social ambitions of myself and our daughter, that is not true. I cared more for his love than all the wealth in the world."

Moffitt had a meteoric career in this city. He began life as a $3-a-week dry goods clerk in Auburn, but advanced rapidly to great wealth when he entered the realty business. BRIDE DECLARES SHE WEDDED WHILE DRUNK

New York, Jan. 23.—Mrs. Blanche D. F. Sheridan testified in White Plains Supreme Court that Donald M. Sheridan, a British army officer married her against her wishes and that she was under the influence of liquor being at "drunk that she remembered nothing of the ceremony except a vague impression of minister and surplice.

Justice Morehauser halted the trial to compel her to produce the clergyman as well as the marriage license and certificate.

Mrs. Sheridan, who is only twenty, received $500 after Sheridan borrowed $500 from her. She sailed for England and that the only time she received a letter from him since time was a request for an additional five hundred pounds.

TWO WOOD ALCOHOL VICTIMS IN HOSPITAL

William Barry, aged 22, of No. 208 Eighth street, South Boston, was found in an unconscious condition early today in a doorway at No. 134 Federal street suffering from wood alcoholism. He was removed to the Relief Hospital and held there for treatment.

Joseph Murphy, aged 37, is at the City Hospital suffering from the effects of wood alcohol. He was found in a room at the corner of Shawmut avenue and Corning street by police from the East Dedham street station.

TWILIGHT DANCE KEPT GOING IN PORTSMOUTH

Storm of Protest Fails to Close Picture Hall Run by Ring

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 24.—Twilight dancing is still permitted at the Scenic Temple, the resort operated by the political ring of which Governor Bartlett and Mayor Hislop are a part, despite the storm of local protest against it.

Even in face of the fact that nurses from the Portsmouth Hospital have been forbidden to enter the place, under a penalty of expulsion from the institution, and in the face of a more unfavorable report from the federal investigators, the picture dance hall continues.

The better class of Portsmouth citizens who have the city's interests at heart openly declare that they are ashamed at the state of affairs which permits their city to be among the few in the country to allow the questionable twilight dancing.

So far as the citizens can ascertain, Portsmouth is the only city in New England which allows dancing in semi-darkened halls.

They point to Boston and to Massachusetts where twilight dancing was once permitted but was later forbidden because of its abuses.

PATRONAGE REDUCED.

Since the expose of conditions at the hall the patronage has been considerably reduced and the owners of the place have instituted a veritable deluge of propaganda to offset the Federal investigator's report.

Columns upon columns of material favorable to the theatre dance hall has been printed in the Portsmouth Times, Governor Bartlett's organ, and by appealing to the pride of its citizens the ring leaders are attempting to cover up their own interests in the hall. The ring appeals to Portsmouth people to combat all unfavorable comment on the city and its resorts.

The suggestive class of pictures shown at the two other movie houses operated by the ring have not been changed. The pictures are all of the so-called society type in which the domestic triangle features. They appear to be hand picked and in Portsmouth a moving picture patron does not see the variety that is general exhibited in other cities.

American Employe Gets 3 Months for "Showing" Paper in Portsmouth

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 24.—Samuel Smith, an employe of the circulation department of the Boston American, was sentenced to serve three months in the county jail when he appeared before Judge E. L. Guptill in the local police court on a charge of showing a copy of the Boston American, a newspaper devoted to the printing of stories of lust, crime and bloodshed." He appealed and furnished bonds of $200.

The only witness against him was Austin P. Elinwood, a plain clothes officer, who said under cross-examination that he did not even read the paper before placing Smith under arrest. "I just looked at the front page," he said. "And, seeing that Portsmouth was mentioned, I arrested him; those were my instructions."

Smith was taken into custody last Tuesday on the Lafayette road as he was bringing a bale of Boston American into the city enroute for towns in Maine.

The papers had been unloaded at North Hampton and were being taken by car to the end of the route.

Elinwood testified that John L. Mitchell, attorney for Mayor Hislop and Volney A. Hodgdon, an employe of the Mayor's garage, were present with him when he made the arrest. None of them owned the American, except to the extent that they belonged to Portsmouth as citizens, he stated.

Attorney Samuel W. Emery, representing the Boston American, moved to have the case dismissed on the grounds that the complaint was fully insufficient as the state under which the case was brought specifically states that the publication must be "devoted wholly to lust, crime and bloodshed." He contended that the Boston American is not such a paper, but Judge Guptill overruled his objection.

In presenting his case, Attorney John Mitchell did not assume that the story of the activities of Portsmouth's political ring, contained in Tuesday's issue, came under the meaning of the statute. To sustain his case he read excerpts from the paper of other news items, a divorce case, a suit for polygamy—news articles that were permitted in every Boston newspaper on that day.

3 WOBURN CHILDREN RESCUED BY FIREMEN

Two pieces of motor apparatus, displaying the three-bound rescue, were unable to make headway in the blazing home of Emanuel Sousa, Belmont street, Woburn, and the flames extinguished the flames by attaching a garden hose to a faucet in the kitchen of the house. Three small children, two of whom were found overcome by smoke, lying under a bed in one of the upper chambers, were carried to safety by Fire Chief Frank E. Tracy and Driver John McGann.

Birdseye View of Proposed New Stuart Street, From Back Bay to South Station

PLAN $4,000,000 STREET TO BOOM PARK SQUARE

Favorable action on the proposed new Stuart street highway from Huntington avenue and Exeter street to Washington and Avery streets, making a short route to the Back Bay section, is expected when the City Council considers the Stuart street plan at its meeting next Monday.

Mayor Peters is in favor of the old Stuart street thoroughfare and its extension, even at the cost of sacrificing buildings in the vicinity of Eliot, Boylston and Avery streets, and civic and State officials generally express themselves in favor of the project. No scheme previously devised, it is thought by many, will go further toward solving the complicated traffic problem in downtown Boston.

It is proposed to build the new highway eighty feet wide throughout, beginning at a point approximately one block from Copley Square and running in a straight line, crossing Dartmouth, Clarendon, Berkeley, Arlington, Church, Broadway to Tremont street to the corner of Eliot. Here it turns slightly northeasterly and runs diagonally to Washington and Avery streets.

The proposed road will intersect Boylston street at a point about midway between Washington and Tremont streets. This will necessitate the tearing down of many buildings, the cost of which has been estimated and duly provided for in the bill which the City Council is asked to enact.

DIRECT TO DEWEY SQUARE.

In connection with the proposed thoroughfare, a new avenue leading from Tremont and Eliot streets, where the proposed Stuart street extension turns northeasterly and running directly into Dewey square, also is planned.

This would greatly relieve the pressure of traffic between the South station and the business section south of the Common, as well as points in the Back Bay.

Mayor Peters has formally asked the City Council to accept the plan, which is embraced by Chapter 329 of the Acts of 1917, so as to give him the necessary authority to proceed with the stuart street extension. The plan provides for the widening of Eliot street, which is now a short street. Its adoption would mean a demonstration of the Excess Condemnation Act, of which the city has not taken advantage since its passage.

CALLS FOR $4,000,000.

Furthermore, the plan authorizes a loan outside of the debt limit of the city not exceeding $4,000,000, while it protects the city by stipulating that before the undertaking is started certain guarantees will be given by those people behind the plan, who are the Park Square Real Estate Trust.

The city is safeguarded by the guarantee of indemnity for all expenses in excess of $250,000 for the improvement. These guarantees, Mayor Peters says, have been provided for.

The plan in operation would be the first step in the City Planning Board's so called "Western Artery," linking the various sections with the territory further south and west. Extensive development and construction work is planned for the territory which the new street would open, not only in the Park Square district, where improvements have been put off on account of the war, but in the district between Columbus Avenue and Tremont street.

Proposed developments include the erection of a 1,000-room first-class hotel to cost nearly $7,000,000 and will be built by the same group as the new one in Boston; while the John Hancock building now under construction will cost $2,000,000. Several other big business developments in this section are projected.

TOTAL COST $3,118,000.

It was estimated that the total cost of property condemnation and street construction will cost $3,118,000, while betterment assessments will amount to at least $1,460,000, thus making the next cost of the undertaking $1,718,000. After condemnation there will be an area remaining of 116,600 square feet. This, the real estate interests have offered to purchase at $16 a foot unless the city receives a better offer. This would bring in a total of 1,749,000.

The contemplated improvements would not only relieve traffic congestion, but would materially enhance the values and increase revenue and taxes, affording an added income to the city of Boston of at least $200,000 a year for five years, and increasing in the future. It is claimed, therefore, that by an outlay of $4,000,000 apart from the debt limit of the city that the improvement can be accomplished at a maximum expense of $250,000 to the city, and this amount has been guaranteed.

DIRECT HIGHWAY.

The new highway, if built, will effect more direct communication between the Back Bay Station and the South Station. Advocates of the new road have pointed out that by the lack of this and a similar highway the city has lost millions of dollars in property developments, as many merchants hesitated from locating in the Back Bay with its present traffic facilities for reaching the city.

The building of this road would do away with that fear of many merchants of having their business ruined by locating too far from the business centre. Many students of the traffic situation, which has baffled the experts of this city for years, see in this new highway the logical outlet for the congestion. Much of the traffic north-bound will be diverted from Tremont street, between Eliot street and Scollay square, and the traffic will go by the new route, which should serve to relieve the present congestion of traffic.

Figures which have been given to the city by the backers of this plan show that within a few years an enormous increase will be turned over yearly to the city as a result of the increased business and valuation in property in the district that will be affected by the new highway.

SEVERAL HOTELS AFFECTED.

Of the many buildings that will suffer if the plan is approved by the City Council several hotels will either be torn down completely or will at least lose part of their structures. The hotels which will be affected by the building of the new highway are in the downtown section of the city.

If the new highway is built, Police Station 4 on Lagrange street will probably be razed, as it is directly in the way of the new proposed avenue, which will be an extension of the Stuart street highway.

This avenue will be of great advantage in relieving Summer, Hanford, Tremont and Washington streets of the heavy traffic bound for the South Station and for South Boston.

All traffic bound for the South Station from other parts of the city may take the regular routes without much chance of congestion.

Gives Health Rules to Avoid Spread of Influenza

By strictly observing a few simple health rules the spread of the influenza epidemic in Massachusetts may be stopped, according to Dr. Stanley H. Osborn, epidemiologist of the State Department of Public Health. He says that there has been a larger number of cases reported this week as compared with a week ago.

He gives the following rules, based on his studies of experiences of the influenza epidemics among the British and American forces, to avoid the germs of the malady:

"Influenza germs are present in the nose and the mouth.

"Influenza is spread from one person to another only by germs present in the saliva of the mouth and in the nasal discharges. This material is conveyed by coughing, sneezing and kissing, and on handkerchiefs, towels and clothing coming in contact with the mouth and nose. To avoid the disease:

"You must keep clean.

"Avoid people who cough and sneeze.

"Do not visit persons sick with colds.

"Dress warmly.

"Wash your hands before eating.

"Avoid crowded places.

"Take daily exercises: walk to work.

"Sleep with your window open.

"Avoid worry and excesses.

"Avoid common drinking cups and towels."

PUPILS GAIN WEIGHT ON MILK DIET

Brookline Young Folks Benefited by Campaign for Better Health

Sweeping changes in the curriculum of the Brookline public schools are advocated by the new superintendent, Oscar C. Gallagher.

In making the recommendations the superintendent said that he was merely pointing out some of the problems which appeared pressing to a newcomer.

The report included suggestions for the reorganization of the school system on a twelve-year basis; the necessity for uniformity in textbooks and methods of teaching and extension of the regular school period, and careful consideration of the demand for additional and more modern classroom facilities.

Superintendent Gallagher said that the health of the pupils was of paramount importance, and stated that systematic weighing of the children can be begun. Moreover, he said a campaign had been started to encourage school children to drink milk both at home and during the mid-morning recess. Reports from various schools show increases in weight as a result, he declared.

Touching on the condition of school buildings, the superintendent said that some are so ill ventilated and lighted as seriously to impair the progress and health of the pupils. Special plans have been made to remedy these defects, he added, but the replacement of these buildings by more modern structures must be undertaken as soon as possible.

D'ANNUNZIO WILL STAND PAT IN FIUME

Rome, Jan. 24.—Gabriele D'Annunzio, according to all information reaching here, is as firmly determined as ever to hold Fiume "against all comers." Even if Premier Nitti, on the basis of the latest proposals for an Adriatic settlement, should pledge the evacuation of Fiume by forces of the poet-warrior, the latter, it is declared will stand pat and merely answer, in effect:

"Who is going to expel me?"

FATE OF KAISER OF NO INTEREST TO GERMANS

Don't Seem to Care What Allies Do to the Old "War Lord"

By International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 24.—All indications here are that "Germany does not owe a rap what becomes of the ex-Kaiser."

The Berlin press, including monarchist and reactionary newspapers, have made no special mention of the former Emperor for a week. There is not a newspaper maintaining a correspondent at Amerongen, Holland, where the erstwhile war lord is living.

Even now when the allied press is filled with dispatches bearing upon the case of the former German ruler the Berlin newspapers have been only reporting British and Dutch telegrams without any comment. Not a single political writer of prominence has come forward as the champion for the ex-Kaiser. In the vernacular of the public William's cause is as "dead as a doornail and ancient history in Germany."

As a sporting writir might put it, Germany, both privately and officially, is sitting coolly indifferent watching from "ringside seats" the legal contest between the allies and Holland, with no bets on the outcome. It is declared that no matter how the negotiations for the ex-Kaiser's extradition terminate the result will have no effect one or the critical problem of reconstruction that has been left by the war.

The monarchists are said to have abandoned their former chief because he fled into Holland. The republicans are indifferent, believing that there is no danger of his return.

Political students say that the ex-Kaiser is not hated; he is simply ignored, being regarded as a puppet in the hands of a strong element that formerly influenced him. Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Ludendorff were said to represent the strongest influences back of the ex-Kaiser, especially during the latter half of the war.

While there is a little interest in the ex-Kaiser's case, it is felt that the attempt to extradite other German war figures some of whom are still in this country, may be filled with danger. It is feared that efforts to secure certain German officers, who still have a hold on the public mind, might inflame nationalist and anti-Republican reactions.

The German public probably will waken into keen interest when the Allies begin demanding other Germans who figured prominently in the war.

12 DEER IN BARN! MISSED EVERY ONE

Canterbury, Ct., Jan. 24.—Sam Lupsvik, a Russian farmer in the eastern part of the town went to his farm at an early hour, and was both surprised and startled to find his barn filled with wild deer. A rifle shotgun was brought out and visions of deep meat longed before the wife and little Lukwika, but every shot range no venison was bagged. Fully a dozen animals must have been in the barn by the looks of the trampled snow.

INFLUENZA IN ARMY TAKES QUICK JUMP

Washington, Jan. 24.—An increase from 11 to 897 cases of influenza is reported in the army for the latest week of the surgeon-general's report, according to an announcement of the war department.

Northeastern School Holds Banquet for War Heroes

The annual school banquet of Northeastern College School of Commerce and Finance tonight at the Hotel Thorndike promises to be of particular interest, as it is the first opportunity for the large number of ex-service men, who have returned to the school to finish their courses, to get together in a social way.

Nearly 40 per cent. of the students of the school saw service during the war, and the American Legion button is an exceedingly common sight in the lapels of the undergraduates.

The program includes speeches by the college and school officials and a vaudeville entertainment.

APPOINTMENT BUREAU NOW 10 YEARS OLD

Women's Educational and Industrial Union Branch Plans Banquet

Plans are being formulated for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Appointment Bureau of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union at a banquet Monday evening. Speakers include President Lefavour of Simmons College, chairman of the Board of Trustees; Clarence Kingsley of the State Board of Education; Ralph Wells, Mrs. Everett Fiske, Miss Cora Coolidge, Miss Amy Woods and Miss Marion Park, acting dean of Simmons College.

The appointment bureau which started with only $125 capital, now has branches in practically all local colleges.

Its purpose is to place high school and college graduates in specialized positions which are adapted to their individual training. Those who have no desire to teach, and who find difficulty in securing "the right niche" for themselves, are offered through this bureau special vocational information in regard to positions open to women.

In the last few years the work of the bureau has been greatly extended. Twenty-three classes of employment are recognized, and in each of these there is a wide range of specialized positions.

Miss Florence Jackson, head of the bureau, stated that there was a great demand at present for trained women in every line, and particularly for efficient stenographic secretaries.

"It is impossible," said Miss Jackson, "to find enough girls for work of this kind. We have at present many openings with salary ranging from $15 to $25 which we are unable to fill. During the past month we have received over 127 orders, and forty-five demands for vocational advice. The department is constantly growing, as people realize the need for trained and experienced workers. We are cooperating with associations all over the country and are in touch with women in every State of the Union."

Miss Jackson also stated that in the past ten years over 90 per cent of the people who had registered had received positions through the bureau, and that over 650 per cent. of requests for various business organizations had been filled.

ADMITS ILLITERATE BRIDES OF SOLDIERS

Washington, Jan. 24.—Relaxation of exclusion provisions of the immigration laws to permit the admission of illiterate females coming to this country to be brides of Americans who served in the overseas forces, is proposed in a bill favorably reported to the House by the Immigration Committee. The measure was urged by Senator Calder, New York and Representatives Siegel and Sabath.

BITTER CONTROVERSY OVER DE VALERA IN WORCESTER

Worcester, Jan. 24.—Forces are being lined up in Worcester to wage one of the fiercest battles seen here in years, all since Councilman William B. Smith, in a meeting of the city government, voiced what his opponents call a Tory objection to Worcester's welcome to Eamon De Valera, president of the Irish Republic, who is coming to Worcester on February 6.

Councilman Smith, it is claimed bysome, is the tool of Ulsterites in Worcester, who put him up to starting the whole program of opposition to De Valera here by opposing a resolve introduced in the city government meeting to welcome the Irish president. Bitter feelings have grown more bitter since the action of Smith found itself agitated, and church leaders, college professors and others are taking a hand in the talk.

All the gossip goes to show that here in Worcester, Padraic Pearse branch, Friends of Irish Freedom, and all others of Irish birth or extraction are to take the issue into the open and fight it out with all antagonists.

MAYOR'S ACTION DENOUNCED.

Mayor Peter F. Sullivan, lately inaugurated as the city's chief executive, has drawn its fires from such citizens as Professor Arthur Gordon Webster of Clark College, over the Mayor's stated intention to formally welcome the Irish visitor in the Mayor's suite in city hall.

Professor Webster says he thinks it is going some for the Mayor to use the city's municipal building for such a purpose and he adds "For the Mayor of Worcester, in his official capacity, to give a formal welcome to the head of a seditious and treasonable movement, against one of our reading and dearest allies, is so absurd that I am sure he does not think of it for a moment."

Webster, who some time ago announced that in the next campaign for the election of a Congressman in the Worcester district his hat will be in the ring against Congressman Samuel E. Winslow and all others also says he is "quite aware that it takes considerable courage for a man who expects ever to get, Irish-American votes to talk like this. Cheek is perhaps the better word. I have both."

WEBSTER ATTACKS FOLEY.

Professor Webster includes Major Thomas F. Foley also in his comments about the activities of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Worcester. The professor has sent his check for the Yankee Division Clubhouse Fund, in response to the invitation which had Foley's name at the top.

"I supposed at the time he was an American and fought for and with our allies," says Webster of Foley, "and I notice members of the Emmet Guards, G Company, the old Ninth Massachusetts, with which he started out of Worcester in the world war, and the major expects the former service men will be present to hear the plans for the reception of De Valera.

SENSATION HINTED.

Prominent Worcester men say the controversy over the coming of De Valera has simply opened the eyes of large numbers to the secret propaganda which has been carried on in Worcester and Worcester County and they hint that some sensational conditions are likely to be revealed.

One of the most active opponents to the plans for the visit of De Valera to Worcester is the Rev. Charles A. Fisher, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, who says he will make an effort to have the Ulster delegation of ministers now in the United States come to Worcester and tell the Orangeman's views on the Irish controversy. This declaration has been hailed with delight by the Irish, who have offered the minister to pay the rent for the largest hall that can be obtained in the city.

Chances of having the Ulsterites meet De Valera in a debate in Mechanics Hall in Worcester have been broached, and the Friends of Irish Freedom branch say they will settle the bill for the hall if the clergyman can produce a debater. Mr. Fisher has not said yet that he could exert influence enough to have the Ulster delegation in Worcester on the same night De Valera is here.

It is charged that the real hotbed of the anti-Irish, or Ulsterite sentiment is within the ranks of the Rev. Mr. Fisher's church membership, but the church folks themselves are letting the minister do practically all of the talking. They say he doesn't represent them when he talks, and they add that they cannot stop him.

CHARGE SPIES AT WORK.

Openly it is charged in statements of Worcester folks that the well-trained spy system of the English propagandists is at work with a full-fledged swing in Worcester.

While the whole controversy, as now being exposed, came out with the blurting of an objection from a first year member of the common council to De Valera's coming, leaders in the movement say Worcester is well populated with agents, paid and otherwise remunerated, who are sowing the seeds from sources higher up in the promotion of English domination.

These things will all be exposed, say the Friends of Irish Freedom and the lineup, as employed in Worcester, when made public, will show some widely known persons, women as well as men, who are agitating the subject.

Mayor Sullivan, meanwhile, is standing pat on the intention he has to meet the president of the Irish republic in the Mayor's office in city hall. Though the city council, voting on straight party lines, thirteen Republicans and eight Democrats, voted against the welcome resolve, Mayor Sullivan has not been swerved from his belief that the proprieties call for being at the door to greet a visitor after the visitor has been invited to call.

HOW I RELIEVED MY RHEUMATISM

BY PETER SAVALA

I threw away my crutches in seven days. In two months I was a well man—and I have never had a twinge from rheumatism since. This is what the remedy, which I obtained from my uncle in Greece, did for me.

I went home to Greece crippled, broken in spirit—sick. I returned to this country in two months, absolutely free of every trace of rheumatism.

Two whole story of my life in America—how I became crippled with rheumatism and how I found the treatment which uprooted the disease and drove it out of my body—I will gladly tell you FREE.

It makes no difference how swollen or distorted your joints may be; how severe the pain or how discouraged you are. I feel sure that I have the means of helping you to find relief in a few days and a lasting relief in just a few weeks.

Send no money. Just write me personally—tell me how you received your rheumatism, and how I may relieve mine.

ECZEMA

Also called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, etc.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA, in all its various forms and mildest cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am confident I do know more about it than any man living, in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. Its cause is in the blood.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Scaly Psoriasis, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say I can cure it, I mean just what I say—I CURE IT, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast expanse of territory covered by the disease can be cured. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than 1 or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write me for the free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely write me today for a free trial and I will give you more comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

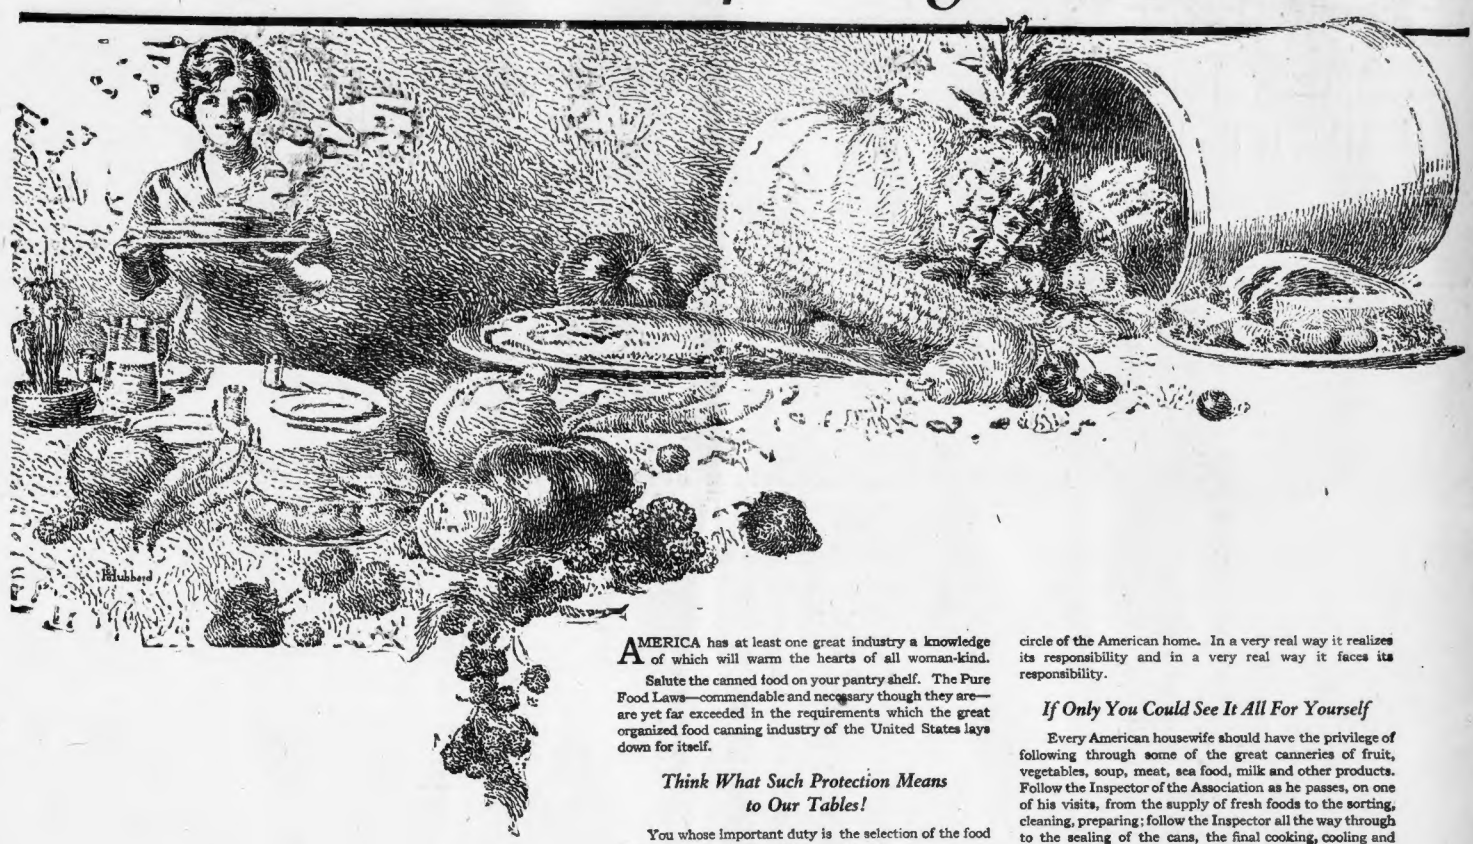
A Canned Food Message -especially to Women



AMERICA has at least one great industry a knowledge of which will warm the hearts of all woman-kind.

Salute the canned food on your pantry shelf. The Pure Food Laws—commendable and necessary though they are—are yet far exceeded in the requirements which the great organized food canning industry of the United States lays down for itself.

Think What Such Protection Means to Our Tables!

You whose important duty is the selection of the food that goes on the family table, remember this:

All over the United States there stretch the great organizations of the Pure Food Laws, Federal and State, working hand in hand.

All over these same United States there stretches from Washington—from the headquarters there of the National Canners Association—another great pure food organization—the voluntary Inspection Service of the National Canners Association.

Not How Little It Must Do But How Much It Can Do

This is not an arm representing force or compulsion. Rather, it represents a united ambition on the part of a vast industry to keep itself in spirit and in practice above any necessity of laws of regulation.

Little wonder, then, that the canning industry has been called "the industry which legislates for itself"! Never does this industry forget that it is dealing with food—with food, the thing of such vast consequence to the little family circle of the American home. In a very real way it realizes its responsibility and in a very real way it faces its responsibility.

If Only You Could See It All For Yourself

Every American housewife should have the privilege of following through some of the great canneries of fruit, vegetables, soup, meat, sea food, milk and other products. Follow the Inspector of the Association as he passes, on one of his visits, from the supply of fresh foods to the sorting, cleaning, preparing; follow the Inspector all the way through to the sealing of the cans, the final cooking, cooling and storing away.

The Inspector represents a system which constantly, and at great expense, searches out the latest scientific facts of importance to this vital work of supplying the family table. He is a symbol of the painstaking care with which the canning business is conducted. He represents the earnest determination of the industry to supply our families with the best of food, clean, wholesome, nourishing and safe.

Canned Food—"The Miracle on Your Table"

And so may American housewives, mentally at least, salute the most self-respecting of objects, the can of food. You are standing before a very wonderful thing—a product which knows the limitations of neither climate nor season, coming to you at any time and from any place. Richly it deserves its title—"The Miracle on Your Table".

National Canners Association
WASHINGTON, D. C.

A nation-wide organization formed in 1907, consisting of producers of all varieties of hermetically sealed canned foods which have been sterilized by heat. It neither produces, buys, nor sells. Its purpose is to assure, for the mutual benefit of the industry and the public, the best canned foods that scientific knowledge and human skill can produce.

'TEA FOR THREE' COMES TO BOSTON

One of the most popular and highly praised farces of the last two seasons in Negrue's piece, "Tea for Three," which finally reaches Boston next Monday. The dialogue is said to be more brilliant than our playwrights usually achieve, while the situations are highly original and diverting that both highbrows and lowbrows will enjoy it. There are but three principal characters, which means that the playwright must have had exceptional ingenuity to keep them doing something amusing for a whole evening. It comes to the Park Square.

Who is She?

Jerome Kern and Ann Caldwell are responsible for "She's a Good Fellow," the musical affair which follows Sanderson and Cawthorn at the Colonial. Kern has probably written more popular tunes in the last five years than any other composer. Musically, I suppose he ranks about halfway between Victor Herbert and Irving Berlin. His scores are more raggy than Herbert's, but not as noisy as Berlin's. The piece boasts Joe Santley, Ivy Sawyer, Dorothy Maynard and Jimmie Mathews in addition to other good performers.

Who "she" is referred to in the title we don't know yet, but I presume she smokes and drinks or she wouldn't be so popular.

Truth Stranger Than Fiction

We critics often dismiss the plots of farces as absurd and impossible. "Too Many Husbands" has a particularly preposterous plot so it would appear, and yet I clipped the following from a New York paper. The incidents are almost exactly similar to those in the farce at the Wilbur.

WOULD QUIT BOTH HUSBANDS.

Durham, N. C., Jan. 21.—A woman suing for divorce from two living husbands at the same time is one of the novel cases brought to light in this city. Mrs. R. A. Griffin's first husband enlisted in the United States Army. She was notified and led to believe he was dead. Later she married J. R. Page. Griffin turned up in Durham Christmas, not knowing his wife had married.

Mrs. Page instituted divorce proceedings against the second husband to return to number one. A few days ago she found husband number one had married again, she charged. She then instituted proceedings against both husbands, seeking to wipe the matrimonial slate clean.

An Actor-Aviator

The morning following the opening New York performance of "Moonlight and Honeysuckle," in which Ruth Chatterton is starring at the Hollis Street Theatre, James Rennie woke to find that he had made a sizeable hit in the role of the young ranchman, and this fact was lifted out of the ordinary by several—exactly several—circumstances.

In the first place, the part was the leading role Rennie ever had played in New York, and marked only the second New York appearance in a career of which some seven or eight years had been devoted to acting. Secondly, Rennie, playing a returned aviator, in the Scarborough comedy, was lately a captain in the Royal Air Forces, and as such, nine months of fairly active service over the English Channel, and a somewhat longer period of training and being trained, on this side of the water.

Rennie is a Canadian—a native of Toronto. His theatrical experience to date has been confined rather largely to stock companies—he got his start in a stock company in Detroit, and for two seasons leading man in the Municipal Stock Company in Northampton, Mass., and similar engagements in Duluth, and various other cities, and interlarded this work with occasional engagements in traveling organizations—companies which, in all their traveling, never signalized across communities of any considerable magnitude.

Methods of Transportation.

Violet Heming, the young English beauty of "Three Faces East," who is mystifying audiences at the Tremont Theatre, rises to defend her country's sense of humor. Miss Heming says that if it takes the English a while to digest an American joke, still they have a chain-lightning comprehension of some sorts of humor.

"Last night as I was going on the stage, Arthur Howard, who plays a detective in 'Three Faces East,' said to me: 'Have you heard the latest about St. Peter? Well, St. Peter went to the gate of Heaven the other morning and there stood a man waiting to get in.

"'Well, well,' said Peter, 'how did you get here?' The man shivered and answered 'Tic.'

"Was I had an aside on the stage which remains for one week more at the Modern. Miss Michelena has rarely had a chance to be well behaved in the play. She is usually asked by the management to be bad instead of to be good, as in "Betty."

She hastens to be a type which the public associates with naughtiness, though in private life these brunette vamps will stand without hitching and support their husbands, if necessary, through thick and thin. Miss Michelena is one of the best singers in light opera. That little operetta, "Betty, Be Good," which crept in here unheralded with a new firm of producers, new composer and a cast which was not very well known, will have completed eight weeks in the city by the end of next week, which comes close to the record run for a musical comedy.

Comes from Cincinnati.

Miss Helen Stover, who makes her debut at the Arlington Theatre as Aida in Verdi's opera the coming week, has had no dilitie experience in concert and operatic work. She has been a soloist with the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, and with Kreisler, the famous violinist, and she spent a season singing with the opera in Cincinnati. Among her favorite roles are Santuzza in "Cavaleria Rusticana," Madame Butterfly, Tosca, and the mother in "Hansel and Gretel."

Percy Thinks G. W. Crude.

Percy MacKaye, the playwright, who has more failures to his credit than any dramatist still sticking to the game, has selected George Washington as his next victim. The unfortunate father of his country is not copyrighted. MacKaye is already being interviewed about his new play. One of the gems of the interview is the statement that Washington was a crude person. Possibly, but not so crude as a MacKaye play.

PARK SQUARE THEATRE.

A theatrical event for which theatregoers of this city have been looking forward to is Roi Cooper Megrue's exquisite comedy, "Tea For Three." "Tea For Three" comes to this city stamped with the enthusiastic approval of New York and Chicago where it attained long and successful runs. In "Tea For Three," which he calls "an angle on the triangle" Mr. Megrue has given the theatre one of the best and brightest plays every written by an American. The story is subtly modern and despite the fact that it deals with what finally proves to be a trifling incident in the lives of several thoroughly nice people it is sensationally dramatic throughout. The Selwyns have spared nothing to make their presentation of the comedy one of the high lights of the theatrical year. The cast is headed by Arthur Byron, Laura Hope Crews, and Frederick Perry.

COLONIAL THEATRE

Musical comedy at its joyous best may be anticipated in Charles Dillingham's latest success, "She's a Good Fellow," which opens a three-weeks' engagement at the Colonial Theatre on Monday night. The book and lyrics of "She's a Good Fellow" are the work of Anne Caldwell, who evolved "Chin Chin." The music of "She's a Good Fellow" is by Jerome Kern, who has aspired in this score to something besides catchy jingles and stimulating jazz. Joseph Santley and his charming little English wife, Ivy Sawyer, head the organization, which includes magnetic Dorothy Maynard, sturdy Scott Welsh, James C. Marlowe, Boston born and bred, and one of the best character comedians now before the public; Dorothy Orle, Bobby Higgins, whose efforts have hitherto been confined to vaudeville, and last but by no means least, two amusing youngsters, "discoveries" of Mr. Dillingham the Duncan sisters, who will make their Boston debut at the Colonial on Monday night.

WALDRON'S CASINO

A real good mixture of incessant fun, sparkling melodies, clever mirth provokers and the necessary array of pretty girls make up the Burlesque Wonder Show, one of Joe Hurtig's latest burlesque creations, at Waldron's Casino all next week. This much-talked-about attraction is presented in six scenes. George P. Murphy, one of the drollest and most artistic of all joy providers, is in charge of the bulk of the comedy. But Murphy is by no means the only celebrity of burlesque who will be seen to advantage. Primrose Seamon, the cyclonic comedienne; Joe Mitchell, exponent of hilarity; Edna Green, the favorite chansonette; Berth Delmont, a prima donna of chic and charm, and a coterie of other masculine merrymakers, embracing Frank Martin, Arthur Conrad and Roy Peck, will be in evidence throughout this carnival of unlimited attractiveness.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

Playgoers who are familiar with the brisk and breezy brand of A. H. Woods' farces will be more than interested in the announcement that one of the most successful of his productions, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," will be presented by the Temple Stock Company at the Malden Auditorium, the coming week. The play is described as a fresh, flippant, frolic in three acts by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

The last week of the season of the Boston English Opera Company at the Arlington Theatre begins Monday evening. For three months this notable organization of singers has been appearing here to crowded and appreciative audiences, and but few other arrangements which cannot be changed, they would continue at the Arlington through the Spring.

Verdi's spectacular grand opera, "Aida," will be the attraction for the final week of the season. Scenically the production will be magnificently appealing to the eye, revealing scenes of ancient Egyptian splendor from cot to act. The role of Aida will be sung alternately through the week by Miss Hazel Eden and Miss Helen Stover, Elaine de Sellem, Alice Joy Carley and May Barron will alternate as Amneris, Joseph F. Sheehan and Leonard Sanford as Rhadames, Mr. Stanley Deacon as Amonasro, Harold J. Geis as Ramfis, and Bertram Goltra as the King of Egypt.

SOMERVILLE THEATRE

"Way Down East" will be revived the coming week by the talented and capable Somerville Theatre players, at their Davis square home, and it is safe to say that it has not lost one whit of its old and genuine appeal. Those who have seen it will welcome the chance to renew the acquaintance of all the delightful characters in this master play of rural life in America, and those who have never seen it will hasten to learn of the origin of the greatly heralded success of the piece.

GEORGE ARLISS

For a limited engagement beginning Monday, February 2, at the Hollis Street Theatre, George Arliss will appear in his new play, "Jacques Duval." This play is a distinct departure from the type of vehicle which the eminent English actor has presented his public. It depends for its appeal upon heavy dramatic situations. Mr. Arliss' role giving him opportunities for the display of that quality of his art in which he gained eminence during his early days in America.

HOLMES ON THE RHINE.

This coming week Burton Holmes will continue his popular series of Travelogues now being given in the city with "Allies on the Rhine" as his subject. Last summer Mr. Holmes, through the courtesy occupied Rhine-Land, down the Rhine and up the Moselle. Mayence occupied by the French; Coblenz, occupied by the Americans and Cologne, occupied by the British, were the three principal objective points of his journey, but before reaching these cities and in between and beyond them, there is a wealth of most interesting opportunities for photography.

ED WYNN CARNIVAL.

The next attraction at the Tremont Theatre will be the Ed Wynn Carnival, which on Monday evening, February 2, will begin a limited engagement. The nature of the attraction is that of a musical revue and it comes with the recommendation of its being an unusually opulent note production, colorful in scenery and costuming and with musical dressing of varied order in which syncopation and kindred stirring measure of tunes are allied. With Mr. Wynn are Lillian Fitzgerald, Edna Whitaker, Maria Gambarelli, Frank Ridge, Ray Miller and the Maysles Special mention is made of the chorus which is composed of what is said to be a truly beautiful feminine contingent including the sumptuousness of the show.

HARRY LAUDER

Harry Lauder the world's most famous minstrel, that musical Scotchman who has sung himself around the world, spreading happiness of a kind which has endeared him to millions, comes to the Boston Opera House for one week only, beginning Monday, February 9. The engagement is of extraordinary interest.

At the close of his American tour, which ends the week after his engagement at the Opera House, he sails for South Africa, to complete a tour of the world interrupted in Australia by the breaking out of the world war. Bookings in distant British possessions will occupy his time for months to come.

WARNER RECITAL

Grace Warner, whose piano recital in Jordan Hall is scheduled for next Thursday evening, January 27, is not only one of Boston's leading teachers and pianists, but she has received no meagre publicity as a composer of note. Miss Warner has written for years the children's songs for the Youth's Companion. Her most recent achievement, which was well received in Boston, was the "Ballet of Bacchus," which was produced at the Park Square Theatre by the Community Players a season ago. Miss Warner also wrote the music for the musical comedy "Why Not," which was produced at the Little Theatre in Peabody House and won a distinct success. Several of her compositions have also been played by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at its Pops concerts.

"THE ROSE OF CHINA"

One of the season's newest musical comedy hits, "The Rose of China," will come to the Shubert for a limited engagement beginning Monday night, February 2. F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, producers of the Princess Theatre musical hits, "Oh, Boy!" "Oh, Lady! Lady!" "Very Good Eddie" and "Oh, My Dear," are the producers of "The Rose of China," which is described as a Chinese musical romance. Guy Bolton and P. G. Wodehouse are responsible for the book and lyrics, while the music is by Armand Vecsey, a musician of

McISAAC says that:

"THREE FACES EAST" announces its last week. The piece has done phenomenal business in Boston at the Tremont.

AT 9:45," Brady's latest melodramatic production, is an unusually well knit and ingenious murder mystery. Plymouth Theatre.

RUTH CHATTERTON in "Moonlight and Honeysuckle" essays a role with more meat to it than her previous efforts. It is a dainty and amusing comedy.

"BETTY, BE GOOD," concludes its unusually long run this week. Vera Michelena, champion vampire of the spoken stage, succeeds Josephine Whittel in the role of Betty.

"THE UNKNOWN PURPLE," at the Majestic, also nears the end of its run. It is an unusual and eerie melodrama worth seeing, if only for its purple ray feature.

"TOO MANY HUSBANDS," the merry English farce at the Wilbur, with its volatile heroine and superfluous spouses, continues to please.

MARY LIKES FOLKS IN BOSTON

"Pollyanna," Mary Pickford's first United Artists' release, now being presented by Nathan H. Gordon twice daily at Tremont Temple, was released in Boston previous to elsewhere through the express wish of Miss Pickford herself, who desired to pay the theatregoers of this city a neat compliment.

"The photoplay lovers of Boston have highly complimented me by so patronising my productions that they have broken all records in Boston," she exclaimed. "I have been appearing in Boston in screen productions at Tremont Temple for some nine months in 'Daddy-Long-Legs' and 'The Hoodlum.'

"I consider that a very pretty compliment to me from Boston theatregoers and I wished to show my appreciation in any way I could at the first opportunity."

Miss Clark a Scout

Marguerite Clark was the first woman screen actress to respond to the appeal for women leaders made by the Girl Scouts in their drive for $100,000 and 100,000 members. As captain of her own troop, she is doing much to swell the funds.

But if the little star thinks she only recently became a Girl Scout, she's mistaken. She has been a member in good standing since they were organized. She might have passed the membership tests at any time. They include cooking, housework, sewing, mending, a knowledge of first aid principles and uniform good fellowship toward your sister scouts.

Barrymore Picture Vetoes.

Lionel Barrymore, star in the Paramount-Artcraft picture, "The Copperhead," which comes to the Park Theatre next week, does not like to be interviewed. But during the making of the picture, a lot of interesting things came to light.

One day he was asked "Is this your first picture?" It brought a smile. "I've been in pictures since the time of the old biograph." It turned out that he has been in pictures for about fifteen years. He played in serials and with Mary Pickford and Henry B. Walthall. In a number of pictures he has been starred, the only two of which he could remember being "The Yellow Streak" and "The Mysterious Conduct of Judge Legard." "The Copperhead" is his first Paramount-Artcraft picture.

Orders an Eclipse.

One of the serious scenes in "The Beggar Prince," the Robertson-Cole superior picture, with Seesua Hayakawa cast in a dual role, which will be shown for the first three days of next week at Lowe's Orpheum Theatre, is that in which the king orders an eclipse of the moon. Believing that his command is supreme and that he can govern the movements of the stars and other far-away planets, he gives the command for an eclipse of the moon. The "eclipse" is caused by "making" the moon go behind a cloud, which seems to satisfy the haughty prince, who fancies he can rule nature.

The camera man, who was commissioned to get the "eclipse," waited for four nights before obtaining just what he wanted for this unusual scene.

Song of the Engineer.

The late Richard Harding Davis gave the world the popular romance, "Soldiers of Fortune," which will be seen next week at Gordon's Olympia. This story pictures the life of the pioneers and engineers, sentinels of the outposts of civilization, who toil with no regard for fame or glory. The praise of the engineer is unsung. Whether his task is the harnessing of mighty rivers, the laying of steel rails across the desert wastes, or the building of roads through mountainous countries, he goes forth to his task without thought of hazard or risk.

Mr. Davis' first-hand knowledge of the engineer's life inspired him to write "Soldiers of Fortune" as a tribute to this unsung hero. It was produced as a dramatic spectacle and the play had its New York premier starring Robert Edeson at Charles Frohman's Savoy Theatre, March, 1902.

Martell's Storm

Mr. Arthur J. Martell, the organist at Gordon's Olympia, who has added vastly to his reputation in recent "haunted voice" exploit, will play "The Storm" next week, in the well-known as the most elaborate and difficult of all musical numbers. Mr. Martell will play his own version of this masterpiece, a version made possible only by his amazing versatility of the new Hope-Jones organ. The recital will be made the more realistic by the use of the lightning and extensive scenic and electrical effects.

"THE OUTRAGEOUS MRS. PALMER"

John Craig's new special production of "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer," with Miss Mary Young in the title role, will begin its engagement at the Arlington Theatre on Monday, February 2. This unusual drama concerning a brilliant and erratic stage star, whose life is suddenly complicated by circumstances when she hears that her favorite son, a lieutenant in the American army, has fallen on the field of battle, was written by Harry Gribble, a member of the Craig company. In the noteworthy cast which will support Miss Young will appear Eugenie Blair, Vera Dale Haines, Charles Hickford, Miriam Lacy, Bernard Thornley, Betty Barnicoat, Bert Pennington, Cora Witherspoon, Kelly Mandon Rose, Marjorie Fairfax, Jessie Allison, Oscar Grey Briggs and John Craig.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONCERTS MEET GREAT RESPONSE

For the "Young People's Concert" to be given by Symphony next Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, at which will be conducted Beethoven's Overture to "Egmont," Schubert's "Unfinished" Symphony and Delibes' Ballet, "Sylvia," all tickets have been distributed through the schools and settlements of Greater Boston. So great has been the demand for tickets that applications already received will fill all the available seats not only for the first concert, but for another to be given on Thursday afternoon, February 26, at 4 o'clock.

KREISLER IN RARE FORM AT SYMPHONY

By FRED J. McISAAC.

Fritz Kreisler was soloist at the Symphony concert yesterday afternoon, and the world's premier violinist gave a very beautiful performance of Beethoven's concerto in D major; that mighty work which begins with four taps of the kettle-drums, like a late visitor banging upon a heavy door.

The news had leaked out that Pierre Monteux has been engaged for two years more to conduct the symphony concerts, a notable achievement for a man who was generally considered a poor choice a year ago, but who has demonstrated conclusively that he is a great conductor.

There was much enthusiasm and a veritable ovation after a brilliant performance of Vincent d'Indy's big symphony in B flat major, No. 2. This is one of the most inspired of modern symphonies, a master work full of rich and rare themes and wonderful harmonies. D'Indy wrote three symphonies, this is the middle one and the only great one.

PARK THEATRE

No motion picture ever brought to Boston has created such a great amount of advance interest as the coming of "The Copperhead," the Paramount-Artcraft production of Augustus Thomas' great American play with Lionel Barrymore in the title role, which opens a limited engagement at the Park Theatre Monday.

"The Copperhead" was produced as a stage play at the Shubert Theatre, New York, on February 18, 1917, and ran there until May 25, 1918, scoring one of the greatest successes of any recent drama on the American stage. In the role of Milt Shanks, Lionel Barrymore, the older brother of Ethel and John, made the biggest personal bit of his stage career.

The film version follows the play closely, beginning its first episode during the year 1860, then in 1863, and ending in 1903. To denote this passing of time it was necessary to build three complete towns representing the same village in each of these three periods.

Supporting Mr. Barrymore is a company filled with names which mean the highest in the motion picture art—Doris Rankin, the wife of the star, who has the role which she created on the stage, being among them.

WALDORF THEATRE

The Waldorf Theatre will present next week "The Spoilers," Rex Beach's famous story, starring William Farnum.

William Farnum has the role of Roy Glenister, the hero, who, from being a civilized individual, reverts to the man primeval and has for his motto "What I want I take." It is a typical Farnum part and gives this popular star the big opportunity of his career. In Mr. Farnum's supporting cast is Kathryn Williams, who plays opposite the star; Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton, and many other favorites. "The Spoilers" will be shown for one week only at the Waldorf.

In connection with this big feature will be shown five acts of first-class vaudeville, a news weekly, a two-reel comedy and a travel picture, the whole comprising by far the biggest value for the money which Boston has ever seen.

MODERN AND BEACON

The Modern and Beacon next week will present a program composed entirely of comedies and farces, the feature picture being Wallace Reid in "Double Speed." Marguerite Clarke in "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" and Harold Lloyd in "Bumping Into Broadway."

"Double Speed" is a comedy by J. Stewart Woodhouse which gives Wallace Reid a role of a youthful millionaire who goes broke and runs plumb into a mass of zestful adventure.

Marguerite Clark's latest release, "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy," is the filmization of Ernest Denny's famous stage play of the same name which created a sensation when first produced in New York with Henrietta Crossman in the leading role. It is a sprightly, polite comedy and seems especially suited to Miss Clark's talents.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

A program of exceptional magnitude has been arranged for the coming week by the management of the Codman Square Theatre, Dorchester. For the first three days, in addition to four acts of the most up-to-date vaudeville acts, news pictorial and photo supplement, George Walsh will be shown in his spectacular photoplay, "The Beast." This is without a doubt the greatest of Mr. Walsh's cinema ventures and is heralded with delight by Codman Square patrons. And furthermore, Charlie Chaplin, the world's foremost comedian, will be shown in his side-splitting comedy, "A Day's Pleasure." This is positively the greatest comedy hit ever offered on the screen. For the last half of the week the vaudeville selections will be entirely new, and as a photoplay feature D. W. Griffith's magnificent love story of the Orient, "Broken Blossoms," will be offered at the usual scale of prices. In this cinema version Mr. Griffith has surpassed all other spectacular productions in beauty and romance.

LOEW'S GLOBE THEATRE

Feature photoplays of exceptional merit are scheduled for the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre, Washington street, near Boylston. For the initial half of the week Sessue Hayakawa, the most famous star of the Orient, will be shown in his latest Robertson-Cole release, "The Beggar Prince." The story is one that is particularly adapted to the versatile qualities of this famous child of Nippon. Mary MacLaren will also be shown in her very latest starring vehicle, "The Pointing Finger."

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Few stories in the annals of literature carry a greater universal appeal than does "Soldiers of Fortune," written by Richard Harding Davis, which is filmed next week at Gordon's Olympia. Its vivid action, poetic romance and intense situations have thrilled the countless millions the world over both as a book and a play.

In picturizing "Soldiers of Fortune" for the screen, it is presented in a far broader scope than the limitations of the spoken stage or cold type could possibly permit.

Arthur J. Martell, the famous organist, renders his own version of "The Storm," admittedly the most elaborate of musical numbers, on the new Hope Jones organ.

LOEW'S ORPHEUM THEATRE

A delightful program has been arranged for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. For the top-line vaudeville act Fred Ardath's "The Financiers," with Matt Weil, will give an amusing sketch on "The Movie Trust." Other vaudeville acts will comprise Marva Rehn in "Doing-Nuttin"; Faye and Jack Smith, who will offer fragrant tunes picked from the garden of melodies; Vera Calhoun in "The Girl in the Air" with a spectacular scenic song revue; Erford's Golden Whirl, sensational revolving aerial feats; and Brewster, vaudeville's most intelligent canine actor. The feature photoplay will be the first Boston showings of the great star of the Orient, Sessue Hayakawa, in his latest Robertson-Cole release, "The Beggar Prince."

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA

Mazimova, the brilliant Russian star, in her newest production, "Stronger Than Death," is announced for next week at the Scollay Square Olympia. The presentation of this great artiste in a great photo-drama is described as a particular treat for motion picture-goers.

In "Stronger Than Death," Nazimova returns to powerful emotional roles after her clever impersonation of the chorus waif in her picturization of Maude Fulton's Morosco stage play, "The Brat."

Included in the big bill of vaudeville are George M. Rosener, Rahn & Beck, Henry and Moore, Black and White and Walace Galvin.

SYMPHONY HALL

Rossini's "Stabat Mater" and Gounod's "Gallia" are the oratorios to be offered by the Handel and Haydn Society, Emil Mollenhauer conductor, tomorrow afternoon, in Symphony Hall, for their second concert of the season. The soloists engaged by the singing society are important ones; Frieda Hempel is to sing the soprano airs of both oratorios; Florence Mulford is the contralto, and the male parts will be sung by Morgan Kingston and Jose Mardones.

A SCOUT TEA

When the Brookline Daughters of the American Revolution give their Girl Scout tea at the Winthrop School, Brookline, next Friday, January 30, they will have as guest of honor Miss Mary Young, who will return to the Boston stage the first week in February, when John Craig presents his new production of "The Outrageous Mrs. Palmer" at the Arlington Theatre, with Miss Young in the title role.

TREMONT TEMPLE

"Pollyanna," Mary Pickford's first United Artists' production in which she is now being presented at Tremont Temple twice daily by Nathan H. Gordon, is, according to competent critics, by far the best picture the famous little star has ever made, and will undoubtedly prove her most popular one.

LOEW'S COLUMBIA THEATRE

Albert Ray will head the list of feature film stars to be shown during the coming week at Loew's Columbia Theatre, Washington and Motte streets. He will be shown in "Tin Pan Alley," the picture that has delighted hosts of film lovers.

BACK LEGION'S BILL TO AID VETERANS

New Hampshire Posts Call on Congressmen to Support Wason Measure

Concord, N. H., Jan. 24.—Telegrams were today sent by the commander and adjutant of the American Legion of this State requesting every New Hampshire congressman and United States senator to support the Wason bill now pending in the House.

The commanders of the posts of the State in conference here adopted resolutions thanking Congressman Edwin H. Wason of Nashua for his interest in ex-service men and women. His bill is backed by the national legislative committee of the American Legion and its purpose is to make effective the beneficial legislation proposed at the national convention of the legion at Minneapolis and at the conference held at Washington.

It includes several provisions eliminated from the Sweet bill by the Senate, and, besides broadening and liberalizing the compensation and insurance laws, aims to co-ordinate the activities of the public health service, the war risk bureau and board for vocational education so that much red tape may be cut out and claims of disabled and dependents and beneficiaries be given quicker consideration.

R. W. Cholmeley-Jones, director of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, addressed the conference and outlined the advantages of the Wason bill.

MAINE OFFICIAL RAPS BAY STATE LOBSTER LAW

Washington, Jan. 24.—The long-standing contest between Maine and Massachusetts over rights of citizens of the latter State to catch lobsters in Maine waters under the Massachusetts lobster size law was heard by the House Merchant Marine Committee. The Maine law fixes the size of lobsters permitted to be caught at ten and a half inches. The Massachusetts law fixes nine inches.

Harry C. Wilbur, of the Maine Fisheries Commission, urged a Federal law denying shipment in interstate commerce to lobsters smaller in size than that fixed by the Maine law. He quoted former Governor Curtis Guild of Massachusetts as stating that the Massachusetts nine-inch law had been put on the statute books by fraud.

LUFKIN COMES OUT IN FAVOR OF WOOD

Washington, Jan. 24.—Representative Lufkin, Republican of Massachusetts, has just issued a formal statement announcing that he favors Major-General Leonard Wood for President.

Mr. Lufkin said he is convinced that the Coolidge managers want only a hand-picked delegation to the national convention that must have no second choice and can be manipulated and transferred at will.

LYNN PYTHIANS WILL BUILD 4-STORY CASTLE

A Pythian castle four stories high, to cost $150,000, will be erected at No. 37-51 Market street, Lynn, by the combined Pythian lodges and temples of Lynn. A corporation has been formed and already $35,000 worth of stock has been subscribed for. An option has been secured on the land, and the title will pass to the corporation on February 1.

ST. JAMES COUNCIL, K. C., TO HOLD LADIES' NIGHT

St. James Council, Knights of Columbus, will hold their twenty-second anniversary and ladies' night at the Hotel Westminster on January 26. A dinner will be followed by a concert and dance. The committee is headed by Michael Costello, as chairman.

MRS. 'JACK' GARDNER RECOVERES FROM GRIP

Friends of Mrs. John L. Gardner, who has been ill with a severe attack of grip, in her Italian palace in the Fenway, were delighted to learn that she had recovered. Rumors that Mrs. Gardner was seriously ill were denied by her friends, who stated that she had been ill for several days with grip, but was able to be about again.

Lurks in every cold. Do not neglect it but remember that Father John's Medicine is best for colds and has had more than 60 years' success in the treatment of colds, coughs and throat troubles. Father John's Medicine is a safe medicine because it does not contain alcohol or dangerous drugs.

DRIVEN INTO STORM WHEN HOUSE BURNS

Brockton, Jan. 24.—Mr. and Mrs. John Malukas with their baby Julia were driven into the storm early today when fire destroyed their home at No. 47 Merton street. The blaze started in a closet back of the kitchen stove and caused a loss estimated at $3,000. Considerable difficulty was experienced in getting the fire apparatus up the hill on which the house was located.

PULMOTOR SAVES LIFE OF GAS VICTIM

Brockton, Jan. 24.—Fred Durgan, thirty-five, was found unconscious today in his gas-filled room at No. 10 Linden street. The police restored the man to consciousness with a pulmotor and he was removed to the Brockton hospital. It was believed that the gas was blown out accidentally.

IRA FLAGSTEAD MAY COME TO RED SOX IN THREE-CORNERED DEAL

DETROIT FANS UP IN ARMS

Young Outfielder Touted as Best Man to Fill Ty Cobb's Shoes When Latter Retires

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 24.—The fans of this city are up in arms over the report to the effect that Ira Flagstead of the Tigers is to be transferred to the Red Sox as part of a three-cornered deal which the Detroit, Boston and Washington clubs are considering.

Flagstead is generally regarded as the most promising player on the payrolls of President Navin and the man who will come nearer filling Ty Cobb's shoes, if the Peach carries out his threatened intention to retire at the end of the 1920 season, than anyone else now in sight.

Cobb's growing business interests in Augusta, Ga., are bound sooner or later to demand his exclusive attention, though his love for baseball may keep him in the game longer than he ever expects to stay.

The loss of Cobb will leave a gap practically impossible to fill. But filled in a fashion it must be sooner or later, and Flagstead is Detroit's best bet just now. His release at the present time would cause a revolt of the fans against the rule of President Navin and Manager Jennings and virtually ruin baseball in this city for many years to come.

There has been no mention of the player or players the Detroit club is to get in case Flagstead is sent to Boston, but it is most likely that one of the Washington pitchers will be sent the Tigers, with maybe another man thrown in to sweeten the bargain. What the Boston club will do for Washington is of no interest to the local baseball followers and is not being discussed.

Red Sox and Giants in Biggest Before the Season Tour Ever Made

The Red Sox and Giants, following the breakup at their Spring training camps will make the most extensive pre-season tour ever taken by two major league teams. Practically every Gulf state as well as other Southern States will be visited in the playing of more than twenty games, the first of which is scheduled for San Antonio.

Austin, Dallas, Houston, Wichita Falls and other points will be visited before the travelers reach the Lone Star State to go to New Orleans, Chattanooga and Nashville will be scenes of baseball combat and possibly some other city in Tennessee will be scheduled.

In North Carolina, Winston-Salem will be visited while a game at Birmingham, Ala., is not at all unlikely. Norfolk, Va., is another city where a stop will be made.

President Frazee and Manager Barrow were conspicuous at Red Sox headquarters by their absence, the latter leaving for his home in New York with a heavy cold as company, and Frazee remaining for the better part of the day at the Copley-Plaza. Had they been present the Red Sox moguls might have dropped of a ball player or two, as Manager Hugh Duffy of the Toronto team came around in quest of a few discards with which to bolster up the Maple Leafs.

Big doings at the Joint National and American League schedule meeting in Chicago next month are predicted by President John Heydler of the National League. Said big doings should include the acquisition of some hard-hitting outfielder to fill the gap left by the departure of Babe Ruth; also, it is possible the transfer of some members of the Braves to other fields of activity.

CRIMSON RULES BIG FAVORITE OVER GREEN

PAVILION LINEUP

HARVARD.		DARTMOUTH.
Bacon, Lt.	r.w.	Ross
Bigelow, c.	c.	Paisley
Emmons, Baker, rover	r.p.	Horsfield
Walker, c.p.	c.p.	Fiske
Stubbs, p.	p.	Dorsey
Holmes, g.	g.	Gale

By CHARLES E. PARKER

Harvard vs. Dartmouth is the offering at the Ice Pavilion this evening.

In pre-war years "Harvard vs. Dartmouth" in any branch of sport featured the game, but with the value of the price of admission, and that Greater Boston hockey fans—at least those of their number who are successful in acquiring Ice Pavilion tickets—are to witness a worth-while contest is assured.

On the play of the Dartmouth team in the Tufts game, this would not appear to be the case. Except for the final two or three minutes of play, in which Dartmouth scored two of its three goals, the Green seemed anything but a first-class hockey sextet. But two weeks ago, when they encountered the Dartmouth Club team on the local rink, they displayed all the ability of a strong college outfit, and it will be the same style of play that Dartmouth will offer tonight, for on the outcome of the game rests the lead in Intercollegiate hockey and Captain Paisley and his men are more anxious to gain that top position.

HELD TUFTS CHEAPLY.

Holding Tufts too cheaply and failure to play their positions and team together in their offensive and defensive tactics, were the responsible factors for the defeat, except for the Green sticksters. In the Dartmouth-Tufts game at Hanover last week, Tufts had but four shots at the Green cage, while Dartmouth's men literally rained shots at Tufts, winning the contest by the score of 5 to 3 despite the really able goal guarding of Surentino of the Medford sextet. This led the Greenlings to the opinion another easy match was in store. Instead they found the Tufts team forcing the fray, and but for the very skillful work of Gale, the Tufts win might have resulted.

A man-for-man comparison of the two sextets which meet tonight indicates a Harvard superiority at both wing positions, a Dartmouth superiority at goal and a Harvard-Dartmouth equality at centre and in the outer defensive positions and, while Harvard will rule a strong favorite owing to Dartmouth's poor display against Tufts, there is evidence that would indicate a very close contest, with the winner in doubt until the final whistle.

BACON GOING WELL.

Bacon of Harvard, on his play thus far this season, should prove the best wingman on the ice, and unless Ross of Dartmouth plays his opposite position much better than he did against Tufts the Dartmouth goal tender will find himself called upon to check many drives from Bacon's stick. Emmons, the Harvard right wing, is not quite up to Bacon's calibre and it is possible he may not play, owing to an injury sustained last Wednesday, but either Emmons or Gaston or Baker will be the left wing substitutes—are fully as able as Horsfield of Dartmouth in all-around play, and hold their positions much better.

The battle in which greatest interest will centre is that which involves Captain Paisley of Dartmouth and Bigelow of Harvard, the rival centres and the speed and skill marvels of each sextet. There seems little to choose between the men in their offensive play and but the slightest possible advantage to Paisley as a defensive forward. The latter is somewhat more experienced and a bit clever at manipulating his stick.

In Stubbs and Captain Walker of Harvard and Fiske and Dorney of Dartmouth tonight's rivals boast excellent outer defensive players. The Harvard pair, however, cover their territory somewhat better and leave fewer holes through which an offense can approaches the goal for a close shot.

Dartmouth's one outstanding advantage is at goal, Gale of the Green team having shown much greater skill than Holmes of the Crimson outfit. And it is quite possible that this superiority in the net will counterbalance Harvard's advantage in the forward line and place the teams on much more even terms than many anticipate.

In any event the game should equal in dash and thrill last Saturday night's Harvard-Yale contest, and that there will be an attendance of similar numbers has been indicated by a week-long besieging of the Pavilion ticket office.

• • •

Don Sands' Yankee Division team was shoved way down in the cellar of the Boston Amateur Hockey League at the Ice Pavilion. A B. A. A. victory was the prediction, but an 11 to 1 score exceeded even the fondest expectations of B. A. A. enthusiasts, particularly when they learned that Jack Hutchinson was not to play in the game. Jerry Geran and Paul O'Sullivan enjoyed a field day at the expense of the veterans, each counting for four of the Unicorn tallies.

An indication of the one-sidedness of the play is shown in the shot figures of the sextets, the B. A. A. securing 11 goals in 46 drives at the Y. D. cage and the veterans tallying once in 13 shots.

• • •

Tufts offered most strenuous, if disorganized, opposition to Dartmouth in the second game of the double-header, and really did much of the forcing during the first half despite the fact Dartmouth scored the only goal tallied in that session. The Green came a bit stronger in the second, particularly in the final three minutes of play when Perry and Cadet Green substitutes, each tallied thereby bringing Dartmouth winning total to three goals.

• • •

The entire Harvard squad was in attendance at the double-header, hoping to gain helpful information on Dartmouth's style of play. Because the Dartmouth players chose to bolt the puck rather than team together the Crimson mentors gained little, except the opinion that Dartmouth was not the team they expected it to be.

• • •

Ernie Doody of Antigonish made his debut as a league referee and his handling of the B. A. A.-Y. D. contest was the best of the season. Fred Scoggin, Yale's hockey coach before the war, and previously coach of the Dartmouth and the Arena Hockey Club teams, handled the Dartmouth-Tufts match with equal ability.

"TWO AND THREE"

"PUTTING THE NEXT ONE OVER"

WITH "DUGS" DAIR

RUMMIES are asking Congress to set aside July 1 as another Memorial Day.

'TIS a beautiful thought with a sentiment as sweet as the honey that the drone bee snipes but refuses to work for. An idea as sweet as the sugar that once roamed in great herds over the plains of America. Which suggests the dope that we ought to have a Memorial Day for sugar, too.

IN future years the mint julep feat will supersede rosemary as the vegetable of remembrance. On July 1 a soup-eyed crowd will gather reverently on the curbs of Washington street while the relics of the swift evaporating tribe of barkeepers shimmy sadly to the tune of "The Old Oaken Bucket," played by an augmented orchestra of thermos bottles and cash registers. The "Oaken Bucket" is the barkeeps' dead march. Leading the tear-jerking procession will be a professional pallbearer carrying a bar towel at half mast.

CAN you lamp a regiment of bouncers flatwheeling along on July 1, 1864? The spring of youth is gone from their once buoyant rubber heels. The sparkle of vitality has flown from their once brilliant cellular collars. The bright red that indicated a robust nose is faded and gone, leaving only a few strands of sickly pink, which is a false blush caused by busted capillaries. The hand of Time is like a mule's hind leg.

CAN that quivering relic be the once powerful bouncer who staked us to the hole's exit fifty years ago in 1918? Do you remember the last that kissed his young wife goodby without taking his cigar out of his teeth? It's only a married guy who can do that. Do you remember the letter which he wrote and which she waited for in vain? Burleson was postmaster at that time.

HE was a stalwart bird when he marched proudly down to the corner and waited for the hokey to come in and spear the free lunch. He could throw a poor sapp half-way home without knowing the fish's address. He thought the swinging doors were goal posts, and many a guy went over 'em without stopping to wait for his brown derby.

THE verdigris is blooming on the brass rail. Some thoughtful soul has planted ivy on the bar and its soft five-pointed leaves twine sadly around the venerable rubs as if it would hide Time's never healing scars. Or is it three-pointed ivy? What difference does it make? There is no chance of being poisoned.

OH, ginger pop, where is thy victory? Oh, Bevo, where is thy sting? The procession hails at the former high licensed mausoleum, while a grizzled brewer places a wreath of cloves on the silent doorknob, whose head used to thrill countless thousands. A squad of former waiters march up carrying corkscrews at reversed arms. A tribute to those who have gone before? Nope. A mark of reverence to those who used to stagger behind.

AND who limps sadly up the Avenue now in full dress uniforms of sackcloth and ashes? It's a regiment of bromo seltzer manufacturers, whose business was swept away in the panic of 1919. Never fire a round of aspirin tablets over the grave of J. Barleycorn. The sun sinks gloomily in the handy West, like a red currant flopping into a glass of near beer. The day is done where once it used to start.

AN old man tries to sprain his ankle so that he will have an excuse for staggering. Hopeless. Legs are stronger since 1918. Then he sadly wheels into a drug store and tries to drown his sorrow in cherry phosphate, which is like pouring water on fish. He drinks sixteen without feeling that tidal wave of sympathy which used to make him kiss the barkeep good-night, whiskers and all. The world is a dumb place. Think of all the friends we used to make after the fourth drink.

MILLER KAYOS SILVA IN THE 3RD ROUND

Charlie (K. O.) Miller proved altogether too tough a proposition for Harry Silva of the West End in the feature bout at the Commercial A. C. and the concluding number of the program billed to go ten long rounds was ended in less than three as a consequence. Silva was game enough, and he gave the members the best that he had, but the terrific punches of Miller, wearing his opponent down in the first two rounds, rendered him absolutely helpless in the third, and Referee Noah Perry showed excellent judgment in stopping the bout.

The other 10-rounder was a rugged battle between the North End's war hero, Battling Louis Leonard and Johnny Emery. Leonard earned the decision.

Willie Coogan defated Flash Rogers in one of the six-rounders. Dutch Reagan of East Boston gave Phil Chrispy of Charlestown a decisive beating in eight rounds and it took Bartley McKittie of South Boston but three rounds to put Young Leonard of Chelsea to sleep.

PITCHER WOODWARD WANTS MORE DOUGH

New Haven, Ct., Jan. 24.—Frank Woodward of this city, pitcher for the St. Louis National League team, has refused to come to terms with Manager Branch Rickey. Woodward says he has returned his contract unsigned, demanding an increase of $1,000.

East Boston High School's junior class won the inter-class meet staged at the Paris street gym. The juniors scored 41 points, as against the seniors' 26, sophomores' 25 and freshmen's 17. Young Arthur Pascol, as a flash and "freshie," starred, scoring 10 points.

EDDIE TREMBLY TO BOX MIKE McTAGUE

By JACK CONWAY.

Eddie Trembly, one of the local middleweights who is gunning for a match with Mike O'Dowd, will clash with Mike McTague of New York in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Commonwealth A. A.'s show at Scenic Temple tonight.

Trembly is one of the best of the Eastern middleweights. He bumped into Silent Martin after that worthy beat Pal Reed at Portland. The former sailor silenced Martin in artistic fashion.

In his last start, Trembly tackled a sleep wallop on Young Ahearn's jaw. He adds that he could do the same thing to any of the local middleweights if they had sufficient courage to enter a ring with him.

Tremly is a tall, rangy fellow, fights box as well as punch, a mighty fine combination for any youth who hopes to become a champion.

McTague has met most of the fast steppers in the middleweight class and is sure to give Trembly a merry battle. The New Yorker has shown to advantage in his former Boston bouts and has boasts of handing Trembly a reverse this p. m.

Jack Noyes of the South End will oppose Joe Dorsey of Franklin in the semi-final of eight rounds. There will also be another eight-session affair between Kid Lewis and Al Ritchie, and a six-round scrap in which Tom McFarland will meet Frankie Sheehan.

K. O. Muggsy's next ring start will be at the Suffolk A. A.'s show at Hibernian Hall, Roxbury, next Wednesday night. He will take Tommy Dorsey of Bridgeport as an opponent in a twelve-round bout. Dorsey formerly campaigned out of Baltimore and is the best boxer signed to clash with the East Boston kayo kind to date.

Burt Jones of Revere continues winning his ring bouts. At the Armory A. A., Tuesday night, he easily defeated Eddie Dunn of the South End. He then hopped down to Beverly Thursday evening and waxed Joe Charley Brennan of Charlestown. Jones' next start will be in the semi-final to the Robinson-Eagan tussle at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday night. His opponent will be Kid Lewis of Lawrence and the distance eight rounds.

Benny Valger quit cold out of his twelve-round bout with Frankie Brown at Lowell the other night. "Bronco Kid Valger" was the excuse given by Joe Jacob's, Valger's manager. Apparently Valger feared that Valger got defeated and thus lose his match with Willie Jackson, which is carded for the Lowell ring.

Valger possesses as much natural class as any boxer of his weight in the game. To the writer's mind, however, the French Flash has failed to show that he has what it takes in his Boston tussles. It will be remembered that when Dundee and Tuck Tufts were matched a month last Summer that Jacobs' miller had the tussle by the proverbial mile during the first six rounds. He even scored a knockout. But once Dundee got started he scored with a couple of stiff body blows Valger drew back into his shell and was content to go the distance. Champions fight back when stung.

Let Valger cast aside some of his caution and fight some of our "rough" boxers and he will make himself much more solid with the fans than he is now.

Can you imagine Matty Baldwin, Honey Melody, Young Goodman, Sam Langford scoring over other famous New England boxers passing up a championship because he was "too young"? Of course I don't. That is the only question asked by these boxers of their managers, when signed for important matches.

Before Jack Dempsey walloped Jess Willard at Toledo he possessed many supporters, who are attacking him for his ring tactics. Dempsey fought for a fighting champion if he ironsided Willard.

"I'll meet all comers as fast as my manager can arrange the matches," declared Dempsey.

But that was BEFORE he grabbed the title.

If you now want to get an audience with Dempsey, you must first make a noise like one of Uncle Sam's mints.

• • •

Dempsey's demand for big money is probably the reason why so many of our service men have turned against the champion. You can't blame a former sailor, soldier or marine from attacking Dempsey when he is demanding a fortune for a small part of a day's work when some of their comrades who served in the great adventure are having a difficult time getting jobs which will give them a living wage.

The fact that the bulk of our army was made up of drafted men and that many of them did not go to camp through choice or favoritism had been disapproved does not change the temper of the service men. They were all in the same boat, facing the known hardships while Dempsey was in a safely-first job in a shipyard. But they didn't begrudge him when they came home. They acclaimed him as a great fighting man. But when Dempsey asks $400,000 or $500,000 for his services it is only natural that the real fighters—those who risked their all on the battlefields of France and on the high seas—should protest.

If Dempsey had done a little more fighting in the ring and a little less talking, he would not find himself with his back against the wall, to steal a phrase from Marshal Hale's book.

All of which is getting some distance from our original discourse about Benny Valger. But what Sherman said about the game of legalized murder might also be applied to the boxing art and its allied trades and diversions.

George Robinson to Box Joe Eagan at Triple A

George Robinson, Cambridge middleweight, has been signed to meet Joe Eagan of Dorchester in the feature bout of twelve rounds at the Armory A. A.'s show at the Grand Opera House next Tuesday night. Robinson takes the place of Augie Ratner of New York, who has withdrawn from the match on account of a split with his manager.

Robinson and Eagan have engaged in some stirring battles. They are well matched, and the result is always in doubt when they mingle.

MATHEY AND MYRICK WIN IN NET TOURNEY

New York, Jan. 24.—Dean Mathey, the former Princeton captain, and Julian S. Myrick won the only match played in the men's double club championship tennis tournament of the Heights Casino of Brooklyn. Mathey and his partner defeated Murray Rogers and Hugh Tallant after an interesting struggle by the score of 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

It was in the last set that the winners exhibited the best tennis. They played steadily together and found many openings in the other side of the net through which they drove the ball. Rogers and Tallant won the first four games of this set in quick order, Mathey scoring several service aces.

TECH-PENN SWIMMING MEET CALLED OFF

The swimming team of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will not open its local season with the Penn mermen tonight at the Y. M. C. A. tank, as had been expected. This announcement was made by Manager Ralph C. Geckler, '22, newly appointed as manager of the Tech aquatic activities. Although the Brown meet was cancelled last week owing to the death of President Maclaurin it was hoped that the Tech tankmen would be able to engage the Philadelphia natators this week, but the action of the athletic committee does not permit athletic activities until after the 26th of this month.

FRED FULTON TO MEET JOHN LESTER JOHNSON

Fred Fulton and John Lester Johnson, who is making his home in this city, have been matched to meet in a twelve-round bout at Mechanics Building on February 3, under the direction of Jimmy Dunn. Fulton recently beat Frank Moran and then stopped Tom Cowler, while Johnson is one of the few heavyweights who have ever received a newspaper decision over Dempsey.

JOHNNY MOONEY WINS, BUT BOUT IS A DRAW

Marlboro, Jan. 24.—Johnny Mooney of Newton, who outpointed Charley Bergin of New Haven in nine out of ten rounds, only received a draw in his contest at the Sportsmen's Club. Young Fuller of Young Dempsey fought eight rounds to a draw, Kid Manning of Boston defeated Young Wilson in five rounds and Jack O'Leary defeated Dan Donovan in a six-round bout.

WINTHROP HIGH WINS FIFTH STRAIGHT GAME

The Winthrop High basketball team scored its fifth straight victory in the Suburban Interscholastic League last night, defeating Natick High, 23 to 10, at Winthrop. Between the periods the Winthrop records swamped the Natick second team, 28 to 2.

HARTFORD CLUB SIGNS TWO NEW PLAYERS

Hartford, Ct., Jan. 24.—The Hartford Club management has signed Norman Reeves, an outfielder of Rochester, 23 to 8. The Tigers won three bouts on falls and counted two decisions. Their Massachusetts rivals accumulated a single fall and one decision.

Tiger Matmen Win

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 24.—Princeton scored an easy victory over the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College wrestlers, 23 to 8. The Tigers won three bouts on falls and counted two decisions. Their Massachusetts rivals accumulated a single fall and one decision.

YANKS' LAWYERS PUT JOHNSON ON GRILL

By W. S. FARNSWORTH.

New York, Jan. 24.—Ban Johnson, self-styled Czar of Baseball, took a fine panning in the Appelate Division of the Supreme Court. Attorneys for the Yankees stung him with verbal jabs, uppercuts and swings. Ban wasn't present, but when his local watchdogs send in their reports he probably will more than ever that he hadn't ever butted into the transfer of Carl Mays from Boston to New York.

It all happened at a hearing of an appeal from Justice Robert Wagner's ruling in issuing a permanent injunction restraining Johnson and the Cleveland and St. Louis clubs from interfering with Mays' pitching for the Yankees. Justice John R. Clarke, Victor E. Dowling, Albert Page, William Lloyd Smith and Eugene A. Philbin heard fifteen-minute speeches by attorneys for each side, and accepted briefs and then reserved decision. It probably will be about two weeks before they announce their findings.

TIME NOT LONG ENOUGH.

Charles H. Tuttle, who led the legal attack for Colonel Ruppert and Huston, declared, after the hearing, that the only kick he had was: "Fifteen minutes is not enough time to pan Johnson." Well say that Attorney Tuttle did very well in that short time, however.

Tuttle, after explaining the justice of the injunction, reviewed the history of the case. He spoke of Johnson's alleged financial interest in the Cleveland club, of the close competition of the club at the time of Mays' transfer, including the Cleveland club, and stated Manager Ed Barrow of the Red Sox as stating that the Chicago, Cleveland, St. Louis and Detroit clubs had negotiated with him for the services of the pitcher.

"Mr. Johnson issued no order of suspension," said Tuttle, "until the Cleveland club had failed to secure Mays, and then did so as a punishment to the successful bidder."

Justice Dowling, who took a rabid baseball fan, took special interest in the case and asked the attorneys of each side a number of questions.

MANY YANKS NOT SIGNED.

"We have but one or certain holdout" declared Colonel Huston of the Yankees. "Jones is the only match played in the men's double club championship tennis tournament of the Heights Casino of Brooklyn. Mathey and his partner defeated Murray Rogers and Hugh Tallant after an interesting struggle by the score of 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

It was in the last set that the winners exhibited the best tennis. They played steadily together and found many openings in the other side of the net through which they drove the ball. Rogers and Tallant won the first four games of this set in quick order, Mathey scoring several service aces.

This Day in History—Jan. 24, 1920

THIS is the anniversary of the birth, in 1749, of Charles James Fox, the famous English orator and statesman. He was the most strenuous opponent of the war with America and also favored the French Revolution, and opposed the ruinous wars with France. He died at fifty-right.

A Remarkable Fish

THE most wonderful fish in the world looks more like a reptile. It cries like a cat, and is also able to growl. It has lungs, puts its head out of water and breathes air just as a land animal does. Lungfish are a link between reptiles and fishes—the nearest kin to the stock from which fishes and reptiles both sprang.

The Cinema Murder

A Thrilling Mystery Film Serial of Love and Intrigue in England and New York

"The Cinema Murder" in motion pictures, with Miss Marion Davies as the charming heroine, a Cosmopolitan production, is being shown this week at the Bowdoin Square Theatre in Boston and at theatres in several surrounding cities. Screened under direction of George D. Baker. Presented by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation as a Paramount-Artcraft Picture.

By E. Phillips Oppenheim

CHAPTER III.

THE success of "The House of Shame" was as immediate and complete as was the social success of its author. After a few faint-hearted attempts, Phillip and Elizabeth both agreed that the wisest course was to play the bold game—to submit himself to the photographer, the interviewer, and, to some judicious extent, to the wave of hospitality which flowed in upon him from all sides. He threw aside completely and utterly, every idea of leading a more or less sheltered life.

His photograph was in the Sunday newspapers and the magazines. It was quite easy, in satisfying the appetite of journalists for copious personal details, especially after the hints dropped by Mr. Fink, to keep them carefully off the subject of his immediate past. There had been many others in the world who, on attaining fame, had preferred to gloss over their earlier history. It seemed to be tacitly understood amongst this wonderful freemasonry of newspaper men that Mr. Merton Ware was to be honored in this way. He was a man of the present. Character sketches of him were to be all foreground. But, nevertheless, Phillip had his trials.

Chief Movie Man

"Want to introduce you to one of our chief 'movie' men," Noel Bridges said to him one day in the smoking room of "The Lambs." "He is much interested in the play, too. Mr. Raymond Greene, shake hands with Mr. Merton Ware."

Mr. Raymond Greene, smiling and urbane, turned around with outstretched hand, which Phillip, courteous, and with all the assurance of manner which was making him speedily one of the most popular young men in New York, grasped cordially.

"I am very happy to meet you, Mr. Greene," he said. "You represent an amazing industry. I am told that we shall all have to work for you presently or find our occupation gone."

With a cool calculation which had come to Phillip in these days of his greater strength, he had purposely extended his sentence, conscious, although apparently he ignored the fact, that all the time Mr. Raymond Greene was staring in his face with a bewilderment which was not without its humorous side. He was, in much a man of the world, this great picture producer, to be at a loss for words, to receive an introduction with any degree of clumsiness.

"But surely," he almost stammered, "we have met before!"

Phillip shook his head doubtfully.

"I don't think so," he said. "As a matter of fact, I am sure we haven't, because you are one of the men whom I hoped some day to come across over here. I couldn't possibly have forgotten a meeting with you."

Saw Visions

Mr. Raymond Greene's blue eyes looked as though they saw visions.

"But, surely," he expostulated, "the Eliotanic—my table on the Eliotanic, when Miss Dalstad crossed—"

Phillip laughed easily.

"Why," he exclaimed, "are you going to be like the others and take me for—wasn't it Mr. Romilly?—the man who disappeared from the Waldorf? Why, I've been tracked all round New York because of my likeness to that man."

"Likeness!" Mr. Raymond Greene muttered. "Likeness!"

There was a moment's silence. Then Mr. Greene knew that the time had arrived for him to pull himself together. He had carried his bewilderment to the very limits of good breeding.

"Well, well!" he continued. "Fortunately, it's six o'clock, and I can offer you gentlemen a cocktail, for upon my word I need it! Come to look at you, Mr. Ware, there's a trifle more what I might term savoir faire about you. That chap on the boat was a little crude in places, but believe me, sir," he went on, thrusting his arm through Ware's and leading him towards the bar, "you don't want to be annoyed at those people who have mistaken you for Romilly, for in the whole course of my life, and I've travelled round the world a pretty good deal, I never came across a likeness so entirely extraordinary."

"I have heard other people mention it," Noel Bridges intervened, "although not quite with the same conviction as you, Mr. Greene. Curiously enough, however, the photograph of Romilly which they sent out from England, and which was in all the Sunday papers, didn't strike me as being particularly like Mr. Ware."

"It was a damned bad photograph then" Mr. Raymond Greene pronounced. "Fellow couldn't make head nor tail of it, myself. Well, the world is full of queer surprises, but the last is the queerest I ever ran up against. Believe me, Mr. Ware, if this man Romilly who disappeared had been a millionaire, you could have made a fortune in family circle and been made welcome at the present moment. Why, I don't suppose that there is a theater, if he had such appendages, would have been able to tell that you were not the man."

Phillip's manner which was making him speedily one of the most popular young men in New York, grasped cordially.

"I am very happy to meet you, Mr. Greene," he said. "You represent an amazing industry. I am told that we shall all have to work for you presently or find our occupation gone."

With a cool calculation which had come to Phillip in these days of his greater strength, he had purposely extended his sentence, conscious, although apparently he ignored the fact, that all the time Mr. Raymond Greene was staring in his face with a bewilderment which was not without its humorous side. He was, in much a man of the world, this great picture producer, to be at a loss for words, to receive an introduction with any degree of clumsiness.

"But surely," he almost stammered, "we have met before!"

Phillip shook his head doubtfully.

"I don't think so," he said. "As a matter of fact, I am sure we haven't, because you are one of the men whom I hoped some day to come across over here. I couldn't possibly have forgotten a meeting with you."

Never Can Tell

"Unfortunately," Bridges remarked, as he sipped the cocktail which the cinema man had ordered, "this chap Romilly was broke, wasn't he?—did a scoot to avoid the sneakin'? They say that he had a few hundred thousand dollars over here, ostensibly for buying material, and that he has taken the lot out West."

"Well, I must say he didn't seem that sort on the steamer," Mr. Raymond Greene declared, "but you never can tell. Looked to me more like a school teacher. Some day, Mr. Ware, I want you to come along to my office—it's just round the corner in Broadway there—and have a chat about the play."

"You don't want to film us before we've finished its first run, surely?" Phillip protested, laughing. "Give us a chance!"

"Well, well talk about that," the cinema magnate promised.

They were joined by other acquaintances, and Phillip presently made his escape. One of the moments which he had dreaded more than any other had come and passed. Even if Mr. Raymond Greene had still some slight misgivings, he was, to all effects and purposes, convinced. Phillip walked down the street, feeling that one more obstacle in the path of his absolute freedom had been torn away. He glanced at his watch and heard a down-town street car, descended in the heart of the city region of Broadway, and threaded his way through several streets until he came to the back entrance of a dry goods store. Here he glanced once more at his watch and commenced slowly to walk up and down. The timekeeper, who was standing in the doorway with his hands in his pockets, watched him with interest. When Phillip approached for the third time, he addressed him in friendly fashion.

"Waiting for one of our gals, eh?" Phillip stifled his quick annoyance and answered in as matter-of-fact a tone as possible.

"Yes! How long will it be before they are out from the typewriting department?"

"Typewriting department!" the man repeated. "Well, that depends some upon the work. They'll be out, most likely, in ten minutes or so. I guessed you were after one of our showroom young ladies. We get some real pretty ones over here, sometimes—motor cars of their own. The typists ain't much, as a rule. It's a skinny job, theirs."

"The young ladies from here appear to be prosperous," Ware remarked. "I watched them last night coming out. My friend happened to be late, and I had to leave without seeing her."

"That's nothing to go by, their clothes ain't," the man replied. "They spend all their money on their backs instead of putting it aside. If it's Miss Grimes you're waiting for, you're in luck, for here she is, first out."

Seemed Paler

Phillip drew a little into the background. The girl came down the stone passage, passed the timekeeper without appearing to notice his familiar "Good-evening!" and stepped into the murky street. Phillip, who saw her face as she emerged from the gloom, gave a little start. She seemed paler than ever, and she walked with her eyes fixed upon vacancy, as though almost unconscious of her whereabouts. She crossed the sidewalk without noticing the curbstone, and stumbled at the unexpected depth of it. Phillip stepped hastily forward.

"Miss Grimes!" he exclaimed. "Martha! . . . Why do you look at me as though I were a ghost?"

She started violently. It was certain that she saw him then for the first time.

"You, Mr. Ware! Sorry. I didn't see you."

He insisted upon shaking hands. There was a little streak of color in her cheeks now.

"I came to meet you," he explained. "I came yesterday and missed you. I have been to your rooms four times and only found out with difficulty where you were working. The last time I called, I rang the bell six times, but the door was locked."

"I was in bed," she said shortly. "I can't have gentlemen callers there at all now. Father's gone off on tour. Thank you for coming to meet me, but I don't think you'd better stop."

"Why not?" he asked gently.

"Because I don't want to be seen about with you," she declared, "because I don't want you to look at me, because I want you to leave me alone," she added, with a little passionate choke in her voice.

He turned and walked by her side. "Martha," he said, "you were very kind to me when I needed it, you were a companion to me when I was more miserable than I ever thought any human being could be. I was in a quandary then—in a very difficult position. I took a plunge. I'm away I have been successful."

"Oh, we all know that!" she replied bitterly. "Pictures everywhere, notices in the paper all the time—you and your fine play! I've seen it. Didn't think much of it myself, but I suppose I'm not a judge."

It Isn't the Song, It's the Man Who Sings

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

IT isn't the Song, it's the man who sings that melts the young ice of a maiden's heart. Love zoom-zooms on a soft viol—while a Greek God-for-looks sings in a golden voice a lyrical chantey on the s ft excitement in his heart o' hearts. The weather is freezing cold. All is dark—and the snow flies—and Galatea is icy stone!

Love shivers a tambourine and makes the little brass discs crash and jingle—hey, the song of gold!—while a clever, strong man of the world offers gold vases, the beauty of plenty, and all that he has. Still da'k and cold with icicles lacing everything in sight—and the jingle of sleighbells added on—for Galatea is laughing now!

The poet sings—but Galatea turns a rigid shoulder and fans herself! And the weather is icy and clear!

Ah! But . . . along comes just a plain ordinary chap—just a man-person; he has no "voice" at all—his gesture is not fine. And all the ordinary, everyday young chap can sing for himself is to say, "I love you."

And lo!—the warm sun shines, pink flowers and yel ow and blue open eyes everywhere; pink, downy clouds float in soft, sweet air. Galatea's ice has changed to soft fire—the cold stone of her little figure is flushed to warm, pink, living flesh, her acorn and laughter fade—and her heart leans and listens and lays down its arms. —NELL BRINKLEY.

When a Girl Marries

New Serial by Ann Lisle

HER voice trailed off uneasily, and then the door to the main corridor and the offices opened and out came Pat Dalton.

"Rights!" he called. "Are you there, Carlotta? I found those blooming leases at last, just where you thought they'd be. You were a brick to come along with me."

Then he came round the jutting corner that had hid us from him, and his voice broke off like a snapping violin string.

"Jim, old fellow!" he cried. "And Mrs. Jimmie! Hello, little lady."

"Hello, yourself," I replied, taking the hand he held out.

Jim turned on me when we got into the Harrison-West Company offices. His face was gray and twined with hate.

"You saw that, Anne," he cried. "And for mine from woman's rancor you—spoke to them. Poor Jeanie! Poor little Jeanie! Fate's a rum one.

You drag me down here on a crazy wild-goose yarn about Phoebe and West. And look what we stumble into."

"Oh, Jim, that isn't anything like what you think," I cried. "It's perfectly all right. Truly."

"All right!" sneered Jim. "All right! How dare you tell me that, when it's plainly all wrong—as I saw!"

"But it is all right," I insisted. "You heard him say he's found the leases. Well, they're in business together. The Dalton-Sturges Realty Corporation or some such name. And I suppose they've an office in your building. He'd come back for something important and she came with him—that's how I understand it. Nothing wrong in that."

"No Dalton is in business with the bunch that ruined my father!" he said grimly. "And you tell me that as if it made everything all right. Maybe his being here with Carlotta Sturges is the snow-white thing you think. But his being in business with her father is yellow. That's flat. And if I have my way Jeanie'll start divorce proceedings tomorrow. I'll go on the stand for her."

"Jim, his being in business with them isn't yellow," I protested. "It was done for the most unselfish of motives. I can't tell you now, but truly it's white."

At the Books

"Now for the books," said Jim at last, leading me to an inner office and unlocking a heavy padlocked desk. "Do you know the date of any of those transactions of which you accuse poor West—your pet scapegoat?"

"Let's see. Neal came back about a month ago. The 15th of last month it was. Phoebe made her first winnings the day before, when you and I were out of town for the first time with Lana Cosby. I know because we went to Chinatown together and she bought some jade jewelry—with her winnings."

The pages rattled as Jim went over them. Presently he put back the ledger, he was standing and got out another. I sat silent while he puffed at cigarette after cigarette and ran his finger down page after page. At last I got up and looked over his shoulder.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM Restores Faded Gray Hair Promotes Luxuriant Growth Stops Hair Falling Keeps the Scalp Clean and Healthy 60 cts. and $1.20 at Druggists. Hiscox Chem. Works, Patchogue, N.Y.

"Quit that!" he muttered. "Can't stand having any one snoop around back of me."

"Well, that's over!" said Jim at last. "I knew West was all right. He hasn't made a single deal for Phoebe. Now, Anne, I've something mighty serious to say to you—and you listen." Jim's eyes met mine, and he said in a tone I couldn't quite make out:

"Anne, either you're crazy or West has bullaloed me to a standstill!"

For Mason Towers

We were booked to start for Mason Towers early Saturday morning, so I had only time for a few telephone chat with Phoebe. I suppose this was just as well, for in my first bitterness at Jim's lack of faith to me I might have blurted out the facts which were unpleasant and would have worded themselves about like this.

"Phoebe, Jim can't—or won't—understand the Dick West situation. There's no record of your transactions on the books of the company, so he won't believe they ever took place. And he thinks his partner is a very eligible man whom you would do well to marry. This is all the help we can count on from Jim."

Naturally over the phone I didn't commit myself like that. I just listened to Phoebe's happy assurance that my check was already indorsed over the West, and offered her my assurance in turn that as soon as we got back I'd see her and we'd decide what to do next. What that "next" was to be I hadn't the least idea.

My own personal "next" was to hurry down stairs and join Jim, who had gone ahead to take our bags down to the waiting Cosby automobile. When I got down in the street there sat Tom Mason in the Cosby car on very chummy terms with Valerie and Lana. I hadn't expected to enjoy the party, and Tom's presence didn't change the prospects for the better.

"Those nice people picked me up," he explained. "They've gone out ahead in her roadster."

Neal Greets Jim

Who was with Evvy in that roadster no one said. Perhaps no one knew. But when he arrived at Mason Towers, a great rambling country mince, Neal sat on the veranda with Evvy, waiting for us.

The Valley of the Giants

Thrilling Romance in Which a Girl Helps Win Big Fight in the Logging Region

By Peter B. Kyne

ABOUT 2 o'clock the following afternoon old Judge Moore of the Superior Court of Humboldt County, drifted into Bryce Cardigan's office, sat down unbidden, and lifted his long legs to the top of an adjacent chair.

"Well, Bryce, my boy," he began, "a little bird tells me your daddy is considering the sale of Cardigan's Redwoods, or the Valley of the Giants, as your paternal ancestor prefers to refer to that little old quarter-section out yonder on the edge of town. How about it?"

Bryce stared at him a moment questioningly. "Yes, Judge," he replied, "we'll sell, if we get our price."

"Well," his visitor drawled, "I have a client who might be persuaded. I'm here to talk turkey. What's your price?"

"Before we talk price," Bryce parried, "I want you to answer a question."

"Let her fly," said Judge Moore.

"Are you, directly or indirectly, acting for Colonel Pennington?"

Sudden Query

"That's none of your business, young man—at least, it would be none of your business if I were, directly or indirectly, acting for that unconvicted thief. To the best of my information and belief, Colonel Pennington doesn't figure in this deal in any way, shape, or manner, and as you know, I've been your daddy's friend for thirty years."

Still Bryce was not convinced, notwithstanding the fact that he would have staked his honor on the Judge's veracity. Nobody knew better than he in what devious ways the Colonel worked. his wonders to perform.

"Well," he said, "your query is rather sudden, Judge, but still I can name you a price. I will state it frankly, however, that I believe it to be over your head. We have several times refused to sell to Colonel Pennington for a hundred thousand dollars."

"Naturally. That little dab of timber is worth more to Pennington than to anybody else. However, my client has given me instructions to go as high as a hundred thousand if necessary to get the property."

"What!"

"I said it. One hundred thousand dollars of the present standard weight and fineness."

Judge Moore's last statement awoke every fighting suspicion. He required now no further evidence that, regardless of the identity of the client, that client could not possibly by Colonel Seth Pennington or any one acting for him. Since only the night before Pennington had curtly refused to buy the property for fifty thousand dollars.

"Sold!" he almost shouted, and after the fashion of the West extended his hand to clinch the bargain. The judge shook it solemnly.

"The Lord loveth a quick trader," he declared, and reached into the capacious breast pocket of his Prince Albert coat. "Here's the deed already made out in favor of myself, as trustee." He winked knowingly.

"Client's a bit modest, I take it," Bryce suggested.

"Oh, very, of course I'm only hazarding a guess, but that guess is that my client can afford the gamble and is figuring on giving Pennington a dose where he never knew it to take him before. In plain English, I believe the Colonel is in for a spanking at the hands of somebody with a small growch against him."

"May the Lord strengthen that somebody's arm," Bryce breathed fervently. "If your client can afford to hold out long enough, he'll be able to buy Pennington's Squaw Creek timber at a bargain."

"My understanding is that such is the program."

Bryce reached for the deed, then reached for his hat. "If you'll be good enough to wait here, Judge Moore, I'll run up to the house and get my father to sign this deed. The Valley of the Giants is his personal property, you know. He didn't include it in his assets when incorporating the Cardigan Redwood Lumber Company."

A quarter of an hour later he returned with the deed duly signed by John Cardigan and witnessed by Bryce; whereupon the Judge carelessly tossed his certified check for a hundred thousand dollars on Bryce's desk and departed whistling "Turkey in the Straw." Bryce reached for the telephone and called up Colonel Pennington.

"Bryce Cardigan speaking," he began, but the Colonel cut him short.

"My dear, impulsive young friend," he interrupted in eleginoia tones, "how often do you have to be told that I am not quite ready to buy that quarter-section?"

"Oh," Bryce retorted, "I merely called up to tell you that every dollar and every asset you have in the world, including your heart's blood, isn't sufficient to buy the Valley of the Giants from us now."

Not for Sale

"Eh? What's that? Why?"

"Because, my dear, overcautious, and thoroughly unprincipled enemy, it was sold five minutes ago for the tidy sum of one hundred thousand dollars, and if you don't believe me, come over to my office, and I'll let you feast your eyes on the certified check."

He could hear a distinct gasp. After an interval of five seconds, however, the Colonel recovered his poise. "I congratulate you," he purred. "I suppose I'll have to wait a little longer now, won't I? Well—patience is my middle name. Au revoir."

The Colonel hung up. His head fact was ashen with rage, and he looked at a stuffed owl in a shelf with his cold ophidian stare. However, he was not without a generous stock of optimism. "Someone has learned of the low state of the Cardigan fortune," he mused, "and taken advantage of it to induce the old man to sell out. They're figuring on selling to me at a neat profit. And I certainly did overplay my hand last night. However, there's nothing to do now except sit tight and wait for the new owner's next move."

November Exports of Steel

Exports of steel in November last were valued at $74,676,804, or $1,495,987 less than shipments for October. For eleven months they amounted to $908,891,267, compared with $960,165,677 for the corresponding 1918 period. The decline was chiefly in billets, exports of tools, railroad equipment and machinery having increased.

CRUCIBLE LED THE LIST IN GAINS

Motors Rallied Near the Finish; Last Prices Near the Top

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor

Stocks closed higher in New York, prices being near the top at the end of a strong session. Steels were the leaders. Motors rallied in late trading. Crucible was the leader of the list for gains. Its recapitalization plan, which calls for increasing common stock from $25,000,000 to $75,000,000, is expected to mean stock dividends for holders of that issue. At the end Crucible showed 11¾ points and at its highest had been up more than twelve.

Other strong issues included Republic Steel, Lackawanna Steel, Mexican Petroleum, Texas Company, U. S. Rubber, American Woolen common, Baldwin, Chandler, Endicott Johnson and Retail Stores. They were up from two to more than three points.

In the foreign exchange market, demand sterling was lower, but francs and lire rates advanced. German marks were down to .0130.

IRREGULAR AT OPENING.

Opening irregular, the market hesitated for a few minutes and then advanced. Initial price changes were small and the forward movement involved no great change in this respect. Steels were the strongest and most active issues in early trading, being led by Crucible. This stock gained eight points before the session was half over. General Motors began with a recovery, showing more than two points gain on the first sale, but reacted almost as quickly, lost all its gain and showed a small loss. Motors were heavy on the whole. Oils were mixed at the outset but grew stronger. Mexican Petroleum was the most active, and Texas Co. the strongest. Baldwin and American Locomotive made gains, rubbers sold higher, sugars were inactive, coppers quiet and weak and railroads cut no figure. Shipping issues were indecisive in trend. Industrial alcohol and Corn Products made gains. At the end of an hour the market was strong.

WEEK-END COVERING.

Week-end covering contributed considerably to early strength of stocks. The rally was also helped along by ending of suspense as to how much Federal Reserve rediscount rates would be advanced. Wall Street is of the opinion that the change will have more effect upon commodity speculation than upon stocks. But it is commonly believed, also, that the money strain will be long-continued and prove a restraint upon trading in securities. Industrial activity is a favorable influence and business reports are generally good.

Foreign trade figures, showing a balance of more than $4,000,000,000 in favor of this country, inspire confidence. It is claimed by some economists that when Europe gets back at work there will be a great increase in imports and a shrinkage of American shipments. Others contend that as long as necessity forces foreigners to both buy and borrow in this market the United States will be able to more than hold its own in competition.

EUROPEANS SELLING U. S. STEEL HOLDINGS

Ever since Great Britain removed the peg on sterling exchange there has been steady liquidation by British holders of U. S. Steel common, and the Dutch and other Europeans have adopted the same policy. Liquidation from foreign sources during the last nine months of 1919 totalled 124,657 shares, and at the end of last year there were but 368,895 shares of this issue owned outside of the United States. This compares with 1,274,247 foreign-held shares just before the great war began.

The bulk of last year's liquidation was by the Dutch, they selling 104,827 shares in nine months. Much of this was doubtless on German and Austrian account.

NARCISSE LE CLAIR OF WEST QUINCY, DEAD

HOLD COKE RATES TO BE REASONABLE

Washington, Jan. 24.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today held that rates on by-product coke between seaboard, New Jersey, and Brooklyn, N. Y., Syracuse, N. Y., and New England points were not unreasonable.

St. Louis Leads London

St. Louis now leads London as the world's leading fur market. Pelts entered for the Funsten fur auctions, beginning February 2, at the International Fur Exchange in the former city are valued at not less than $25,000,000. Offerings at the famous London auctions will not exceed $14,000,000 in value.

PRICES HIGHER, BUT TRADING IS DULL

Walworth a Feature on Boston Exchange; Coppers Rule Lower

After starting with active stocks very evenly divided as to gains and losses, prices improved on the Boston Stock Exchange, and the market became strong. Advances were the rule until the second hour, when there was enough of a reaction to give the list the aspect of irregularity. Walworth was the first hour feature, advancing two points and being active on the advance. It sold at its record highest price. Carson Hill moved up and down with a half point range. Waltham Watch sold a little higher, but was less active than before this week. Davis Daly continued in evidence, and was stronger than the day before. Trading in Mayflower-Old Colony was on a smaller scale. Packing issues were quiet and also weak. Aside from a few issues, coppers ruled lower. Demand for metal has diminished, it is said. Gray & Davis was strong among auto accessory shares. Trading was quiet during the morning and the range narrow.

Among stocks to advance a point or more were Edison, International Cotton Mills, Torrington and Agricultural Chemical, while fractional gains were made by Calumet & Arizona, Ventura and Elder. Issues to decline a point or more included Ahmeek and Swift & Co., while smaller declines were sustained by Boston Elevated, Boston & Maine, Copper Range, East Butte, New Cornelia, Quincy, United Shoe and Root & Vandervoort.

Trading was quiet on the Curb, with oils showing more strength. Low-priced leaders receded.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

Regarding Mutual Divide, it is reported that the double compartment shaft will be sunk to a depth of 400 feet and a vein system will completely crosscut and prospect the property at that level. The new mechanical plant is the most powerful and expensive yet installed at the Divide and is said to be an effective aid in shaft sinking.

The annual meeting of the Boston and Montana Development Co. will be held at Butte on Feb. 2 and steps will be taken then to have the stock listed on the Boston Stock Exchange. A power line to Elkhorn properties is being constructed. Blue Jay vein developments are said to have been very encouraging.

It is stated about the Elder Corporation that for the current fiscal year net profits after taxes bid fair to run from $8 to $10 a share on common stock.

Present Waldorf System, Inc., earnings are at the monthly rate of $72,000 after taxes, which should provide, after preferred dividends, a balance equivalent to $4.44 a share on common.

EXPORTS LED IMPORTS BY FOUR BILLIONS

This country's exports exceeded imports in 1919 by more than four billion dollars, the trade balance favoring the United States by $4,017,000,000. This is a record never equalled in the world's foreign trade annals. Department of Commerce reports for the year show the following facts:

Exports for 1919 totaled $7,922,000,000 against $6,149,000,000 in 1918, and imports $3,904,000,000 against $3,031,000,000. December exports were $681,000,000, a falling off from $741,000,000 recorded for November. Imports also fell off for December, total being $381,000,000 against $425,000,000 for November. Both exports and imports were greater than in December a year ago.

GERMANY GIVES HOOVER PAT ON BACK

Berlin Government Resents Attack Upon Ex-Food Director in United States

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND,
Boston American Staff Correspondent.
Special Cable Dispatch.

Berlin, Jan. 24.—In its statement declaring its unqualified approval of Herbert C. Hoover's food relief plan for Central Europe, the German government took special pains to emphasize Germany's gratitude to the American food chief.

The laudatory tone of the official statement is due, it is understood, to reports reaching here from America of an anti-Hoover propaganda being carried on in that country. The government, fearing that his greatly appreciated efforts would be hampered by these repeated attacks, let it be known to American correspondents—unofficially, of course—that Mr. Hoover is regarded in Germany as one of the leading American figures produced by the war. The official statement said, in part:

"In view of the misunderstanding apparently existing among certain American circles as to the new relief undertakings organized in Germany at the instance of Herbert C. Hoover, the German government wishes to emphasize that it gratefully welcomes all efforts inspired by unselfish charity which will tend to alleviate the hardships and dire suffering prevailing in this country as a consequence of the starvation blockade."

Sugar Melting Resumed Here

Sugar melting has been resumed at its Boston refinery by the American Sugar Refining Company after the plant had been shut down for several weeks. Refining here was resumed on receipt of approximately 7,000,000 pounds of Cuban raws. Another cargo, approximately 8,000,000 pounds, may arrive in this city tomorrow.

Cutting Copper Prices

Speculators have been cutting the copper price, offering small lots for January delivery at 18¾ cents a pound, or ¼ cent lower than the quotation by large sellers. The market for this metal is understood to be quieter than for two months or more.

"Whiskers and Propaganda Responsible for Sims' Rank"

ADMIRAL SIMS

The popular novelist, selected by President Roosevelt to write the story of the American Battleship Fleet's Trip Around the World, was on the spot, abroad, during the World War, as a correspondent, and declares that Sims was entirely under British orders and owes his promotion to British influence.

A Woman's Opinion of the Dean Murder Case

"To the Editor of Boston American:

"Having often visited friends in the Monadnock region, I had met Dr. and Mrs. Dean, had seen their charming little home, and been greatly impressed with the personality and refinement of them both. I have followed the articles in the American with deep interest, and appreciate the service you are doing our State in letting the truth be known about this nefarious murder.

"The action of the State and county officials in the Dean case has been lamentable, and must bring the blush of shame to the face of anyone who loves our State and cares for its good name. I believe that there will be one result of their action which will affect the political future of these men in a way they scarcely anticipate.

"New Hampshire women are soon to be given the vote. Will they support for public office men who wilfully close their eyes to masses of evidence pointing to men who are the real murderers, and determinedly with no evidence whatever, maintain that the crime was committed by an innocent, helpless, loving woman?

"If Mrs. Dean had had a son to defend her name, the cowardly attempt to brand her as the murderer of the husband to whom she had devoted her life would never have been made. This action on the part of the officials is an outrage upon womanhood, and I call upon every woman in New Hampshire to register a vow, that, so far as her vote can prevent it, no official who has been guilty of such action shall ever represent her State again—and I believe the women of my State will answer the call.

"In closing I should like to say that at a time when far too many men in public life, even if honest, are pussyfooters on every question which calls for courage, the three selectmen of Jaffrey have shown themselves American patriots of the highest order in refusing to yield to the threats and persecution of their opponents, who want the affair 'hushed up,' no matter at what sacrifice to the reputation of their town and our State."

The writer of the foregoing letter is an officer in various local and State organizations in New Hampshire, who asked that her name be omitted.

DUNCAN SHOWS INADEQUACY OF DEAN INQUIRY

Pointed Out Danger of Holding Medical Probe Instead of Jury Investigation

East Jaffrey, N. H., Jan. 24.—President George H. Duncan of the Jaffrey Board of Trade differed from County Solicitor Roy M. Pickard concerning the latter's amazing proposition to hold a public medical referee's inquest in the Dean murder case, which could be attended by the townspeople, instead of submitting the evidence to the Grand Jury.

Mr. Duncan pointed out that Mr. Pickard's plan would be irregular and dangerous. Mr. Duncan's letter follows:

March, 1, 1919.

"My Dear Roy,

"Replying to your letter of the 28th, regarding the matter of holding a medical referee's inquest—I think I understand what such an inquest would be, and its difference from a Grand Jury inquiry. But it is my opinion that the people of Jaffrey are not so much curious to know what the evidence in this case is, as to be assured that the various authorities are doing what, in the judgment of those authorities, is the most efficient means of attempting to solve the mystery.

UNFAIR TO PUBLIC.

"Of course, there is naturally more or less curiosity as to the evidence, but that is not the principal cause of the disturbance of mind of our people. They would like most of all to have the guilty parties apprehended.

"If that is impossible, they would like the united assurance of all the authorities, the selectmen, solicitor, attorney-general and Federal authorities, that, after the most complete search, they are unable to discover the guilty parties.

"To my mind, it would be particularly unfortunate to have a public hearing because bits of evidence, not completely incriminating, would be seized upon by thoughtless persons to throw popular suspicion upon parties against whom there might not be supporting evidence to warrant a real suspicion, and this would tend to aggravate unfortunate conditions which already exist here.

PRIVACY BIG FACTOR.

"On the other hand, the secrecy of the Grand Jury room would have a tendency, I believe, to induce persons to talk more freely than they would before an audience of their fellow citizens, while persons against whom there might be slight circumstantial evidence would be protected from public discussion of their connection with the case.

"If it should be decided to hold an inquest such as you referred to, there would be no difficulty in getting accommodations for it, either in the Library hall, next to the Selectmen's room, which will seat about forty, in Union Hall annex, which will seat about 100 or in Union Hall itself.

"Yours very truly,
(Signed) "GEORGE H. DUNCAN."

DR. JELALIAN TO TALK AT ST. PAUL'S, NEWTON

St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Walnut street, Newton Highlands, announces that Dr. Jelalian, noted Armenian publicist of Boston, who was scheduled to have spoken at the evening service on January 11, will give his address tomorrow evening at 7:30. Dr. Jelalian was slated to speak when it was determined to postpone his address on account of the Feast of Candles, which occurred on the night of January 11. He will talk on "America's Opportunity in Armenia."

He will talk on the great Armenian question, and will also tell the congregation what the Armenians ask America to do to help them. As this subject is one of the burning questions before the world today, the address is looked to with great interest by the church.

An impressive and interesting musical program under the direction of Mr. Frothingham, choir master, and F. B. Hurter of the music committee, will be given.

TRINITY, NEWTON CENTRE, TO HEAR COL. GUTHRIE

Next Sunday night will be "Canadian Night" at Trinity Church, Newton Centre. Colonel Guthrie of the McLean Kilties will deliver an address on "Standing Together in Peace and War."

Colonel Guthrie was the first Canadian to volunteer. He was in the first gas attack which was launched by the Germans against the Canadians. He was afterwards desperately wounded by a shell, twenty-two pieces of shrapnel being taken from his body. He was invalided home, and when he recovered he recruited the McLean Kilties in Boston and New England. After taking them overseas he was assigned to the Black Watch.

At the morning service the rector will preach on "The Way to Power: and the Obstacle in the Way."

Why Americans Distrust the Government of Great Britain

An Englishman named Gardiner has returned to England from America, and he writes in the London Daily News that the Irish question is the basis of American antipathy to England.

An Englishman never sees anything but what he wants to see, and Mr. Gardiner has been wholly unable to see the real cause of the attitude of Americans toward England.

Americans do not dislike Englishmen; in the main, they rather like them.

It is the Englishman's government that Americans resent; the supreme selfishness of England's political policies, the disposition to make every nation a mere catspaw to drag England's chestnuts out of the fire, and not to be even moderately appreciative of any service rendered.

It is not at all the Irish question which is the basis of America's antipathy to England.

It is the American question.

It is the love which Americans feel for their own country.

It is the self-respect so persistently offended by England which they entertain for themselves as a people.

It is the knowledge of the fact that they saved England from total defeat, and that this service has not even been acknowledged, let alone appreciated.

It is resentment at England's affectation of lordship over the rest of the world and England's arrogant disposition to employ the United States as a useful tool for the furtherance of her own selfish purposes without regard for the interests of the United States.

It is the inclination of England to lay all the burdens of the war on our back and to secure all the benefits of the war for herself.

It is a gradual recognition of the insolence and injustice of the British proposal, embodied in the British draft of the League of Nations which our President accepted, that we finance England in her conquests and then guarantee her in the possession of her conquered territories and peoples.

It is the feeling that there is no such thing as fair friendship with England, no such thing as equable association, no such thing as mutually beneficial cooperation.

It is the realization that the United States must look out for herself in all dealings with England; that England is a shrewd and selfish and, as we say, "slick" negotiator and dealer, whose object is to get the better of every other country, and particularly of this country.

It is the knowledge that England has treacherously corrupted many of our public officials through the cheap bribes of official flattery and social recognition.

It is the further knowledge that England has misinformed our people through biased propaganda, has impudently mingled in our home politics and inconsiderately endeavored to drag us into her European conflicts and complications.

It is, finally, the increasing understanding of England's purposes and policies and of that dominant fact in history—that England has endeavored to destroy, and always succeeded in destroying, every great power that rivalled her in trade and commerce and industry and national growth and international influence; first Spain, then Holland, then France, then Germany.

It is appreciation of the fact that the United States is now England's great and successful rival, and that we may confidently expect to see the same methods employed against us as have been employed by England against the other rivals which she has destroyed; that we may look to see England not only herself plot against our welfare, but ruthlessly use any other nation, European or Asiatic, to root out the rivalry she fears.

It is the conviction that Japan will be the next active antagonist of the United States, and that the secret treaty which existed between England and Japan before the war will be found to be still in existence if ever war shall occur between the United States and Japan.

Americans do not dislike Englishmen and they do not want to dislike England.

But Americans devotedly love their country, and they must necessarily feel a certain antagonism to a nation and a government which seem continually to endeavor to take advantage of the American people and to attempt to undermine the position and the power and the progress of this American nation.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

An Organization With a Bad Policy

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

Earnest young men who have to work in the daytime, but who, answering to an ambition to become lawyers are willing to work also at night, are being discouraged in their aspirations by an organization known as the Association of American Law Schools.

This aggregation decrees that there shall be no more night law schools and denies membership in its association to those institutions who persist in maintaining night classes.

Hereafter, if this rule was to be enforced and night schools abolished, the young man who did not have money enough of his own or a rich father to furnish it so that he could attend day classes, would be virtually prohibited from entering the profession of the law and barred from his ambition.

The late Clarence D. Ashley, during the last years of his life the dean of the School of Law at New York University, was a valiant champion of the night school and compiled a careful analysis of night school work at that institution.

He showed that the night students were more in earnest in their work, and proved this by the average results of the examinations, in which the night men almost invariably outranked the day students.

Any action on the part of educational institutions which stifles ambition or takes away opportunity is an unworthy procedure.

Any plan which handicaps the poor boy by making it harder for him to compete with the sons of the rich in gaining useful knowledge is a scheme which deserves to fail.

The Association of American Law Schools can perform a much higher service to the young men of America, in whom it ought to be interested, by dropping its activities against night schools and taking up some more commendable and constructive campaign.

Should Develop Own Water Power

Michael J. O'Leary, chairman of the Democratic State Committee, has filed a bill in the Massachusetts Legislature providing for the appropriation of $1,000,000 to be spent BY THE STATE in the development of its water power.

Our power ought to be developed and it ought to be developed by the State and not by private individuals who will capitalize it and water it again and again until the benefit of what nature has given all our citizens has been entirely diverted to the private pockets of a few of them. This has been the history of most of the great natural resources given to the nation and not to any individual. This is at the bottom of the high cost of living and innumerable other influences which beset our community.

The government is the highest form of organization, for it is the all-inclusive organization. A task which like the building of the Panama Canal is beyond the power of private enterprise is left to the government, but everything which private enterprise can steal from the community it has been our foolish policy to permit to be stolen. The sooner we abandon that policy, the sooner we shall begin to make a real statesmanlike beginning of a reduction in the cost of living.

Mr. O'Leary is quite right.

More Truth Than Poetry

SHE

By S. E. KISER

SHE isn't too short, and she isn't too tall,
She isn't too stout or too slender;
She's an heiress, but still isn't snobbish at all;
Her heart is adorably tender.
Her marvelous beauty is natural—not
A tint or an eyelash is spurious;
She's adorably feminine, yet she has taught
Herself to avoid being curious.

SHE is innocent still in her heart and her mind,
Though wise in the way s that are splendid;
She is witty, artistic, soft-spoken, refined,
From cultured ancestors descended.
Her features are perfect, her eyes are like pools
In which the dim stars ar e reflected;
She has learned all the good that is taught in the schools,
And all that's unworthy rejected.

LIKE the down of the thistl e she floats through the dance,
Her voice is delightfully mellow;
With a smile full of cheer and a taste for romance,
She is always the merry "good fellow."
She isn't afraid of the rain if it rains,
Her figure is graceful and glorious;
She never is moody and never complains,
And isn't unfairly censorious.

SHE'S ethereal, marvelous, hopeful, serene—
The praise that she hears hasn't spoiled her;
She loves all that's lovely and scorns what is mean,
No sinful thought ever has soiled her.
Her beauty will never depart or decay—
For him she is saving her kisses:
She's the girl every man thinks he'll marry some day—
The one that, most likely, he misses.

THE COWARD

"I can hardly believe it," she said when the han'some colonel admitted that twice he had been badly frightened. "But please tell me all about it. Was it at Chateau-Thierry or in the Argonne?"

"No, I didn't happen to get in there. My scare came when I had to ask her father about it and when we had our baby christened."

REGARDS TO G. B. SHAW

It must be a lot of fun to be able, without any hindering circumstances, to tell the world just what one thinks—assuming, of course, that one thinks.

SIMS FLAYED BY CONNOLLY AS BRITISH PARTISAN

WHEN JAMES B. CONNOLLY, noted Boston writer of sea tales and war correspondent, applied to Admiral Sims for permission to go on a cruise with an American destroyer, the Yankee commander told him he must get permission from British Admiral Bayly. This was in London, in 1917. In the Boston Sunday Advertiser tomorrow Mr. Connolly describes the attitude of the American bluejacket toward the commander-in-chief of the American naval forces in British waters. He charges that British propaganda landed Sims in his high command and declares that the admiral, in his reports, has constantly praised the work of the British navy and minimized the exploits of his own men. Regarding the Sims-Daniels controversy over decorations, the writer has a few caustic things to say in regard to Admiral Sims' own recommendations for honors which the bluejackets, as well as the general public, will read with interest.

That more than $11,000,000 owed to the city of Boston, some of it for years, remained uncollected through sloth or bad management of the Collecting Department, has been given as one of the reasons why Mayor Peters had to go to the Legislature and ask for an increase in the tax limit. The Boston Sunday Advertiser has investigated and found a strange state of affairs. It tells the results fully tomorrow in its efforts to save the people still more burdensome taxation.

Francis N. Balch, formerly of the Boston Finance Commission, and for eighteen years a prominent figure in city affairs, offers a constructive suggestion. John J. Martin, president of the Exchange Trust Company, and long among the leaders in Boston real estate interests, places the blame for the shortage of municipal income on the large taxpayers who must, he says, be brought in time soon by punitive methods if the welfare of the community is not to suffer permanently.

A new and greater war by the hate-blinded Germans is predicted by Prince Hohenlohe.

"The war cloud is becoming more intense every day," he says, warning his countrymen they face annihilation.

"Everywhere war propaganda and preparation for war is working overtime. The poison of hate is being distilled into the masses. The people seem to have learned nothing."

"What will be the outcome of the Irish situation?" asks Colonel Arthur Lynch, former Peter Parliament member, who is touring the United States. "The immediate prospect is gloomy. Both sides are moving into a denouement which almost inevitably means a welter of blood. I believe the final settlement must be the recognition of the right of Ireland to self-determination. That self-determination will surely imply an Irish republic."

The sinister policy of Japan toward the United States is revealed in an article by Shigenobu Okuma, "the Grand Old Man" of Japan. He declares his nation will never permit another country to gain a foothold in China that is denied to Japanese and gives his version of why jealousy exists in the Orient.

Helpless Indian natives were shot down in cold blood and left to die by General Dyer, commander in the Punjab district, when they attempted to hold a meeting, 500 being killed in ten minutes. This is but one of his several horrible cruelties revealed for the first time in the report of the official Hunter inquiry and which he attempted to justify by saying a general uprising was threatened in the Punjab district.

King Constantine, in the first interview he has given since he was exiled from Greece, declares his country lost by joining the allies and are now being controlled only by a reign of terror since they have been in power, how they were betrayed by Venizelos. He believes he will soon be recalled to Athens and acclaimed as ruler by an awakened people.

"There must be more democracy in industry in order to curb the spirit of unrest," says Ray Stannard Baker in the latest of his series of articles in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Mr. Baker says the influence of unions is doing more to check extreme radicals than deportations accomplish.

"There is no such thing as too much work," declares ex-Mayor Thomas N. Hart, ninety-one years old and looking forward to his 100th birthday. "Ninety-nine cases of 'overwork' in a hundred are simply cases of worry. Nothing shortens life more certainly."

Mr. Hart gives his views on national prohibition, Bolshevism, the anti-sedition bill and free speech and tells of Boston when he was a boy.
